ARMY OF CUBAN REBEL NEGROES CAPTURES EL CANEY

WOMEN APPEAL TO FOSS TO SAVE MRS. CUSUMANO

EL CANEY IS LOOTED BY CUBANS

United States Ready to Dispatch Army of 7,000 to Cuba if Marines Fail to Protect Americans, and Intervention May Result.

SANTIAGO, May 24.—Federal troops patrolled El Caney del Sitio today, following the sack of the town yesterday by negro rebels under General Ovepet. El Caney del Sitio is in the heart of a rich plantation district, four miles from Palma Soriano, on the Bayamo branch of the Cuba Company Railroad. The rurales in the barracks of the looted town were unable to make but a feeble resistance against the attack, because of their inferior numbers.

Palma Soriano is about twenty miles northwest of Santiago. El Caney, the scene of a battle in the Spanish-American War, is east-northeast of Santiago, less than five miles away.

The negro revolt today reached an acute stage. The insurrection continues to spread, having gained a strong foothold in Santiago province during the last twenty-four hours. Foreign lives and property are in danger. The rebels are attacking isolated towns and pillaging and burning plantations.

The government today issued reassuring statements, but fresh alarm was caused when President Gomez called upon the citizens to volunteer in Oriente province, where the negroes are led by General Estenoza, the insurrecto commander-in-chief.

The defense of Havana have been crippled by the withdrawal of troops to crush the rebels and the residents were relieved when they learned that 700 United States marines have been ordered to Cuba.

May Land 7,000 Soldiers

It was reported here today that the United States was preparing to send an army of 5,000 troops here. 2,000 to be landed at Havana and 3,000 at Santiago. If the American government is compelled to intervene it will never withdraw its troops. This was the opinion generally expressed.

Armed bodies of blacks are said to be only fifteen miles from Havana and other insurrecto forces in Matanzas are being steadily reinforced. More bands have been organized in Oriente and Santa Clara. In the latter the citizens are armed, contained by officers of the rural guards.

At Cienfuegos the whites from the rural districts are seeking refuge. In all sections many blacks have disappeared and are believed to have enlisted in the rebel ranks, which are now said to number 10,000 men.

Ready for Intervention

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Scenes of activity that marked the mobilization of American troops on the Mexican border were repeated at the War Department today. This was due to the tense situation in Cuba and the fear that an army would be needed to back up the 700 marines who sailed on the transport Prairie.

The Navy Department officials were also busy, while the State Department anxiously awaited advices from Minister Beaupre. Reports were circulated that if the situation became much worse President Taft would abandon his New Jersey tour and return here at once.

The exact steps to be followed if intervention is found necessary have already been marked out. Major General Wood, while Governor General of Cuba, gained a knowledge of conditions that will prove of immense benefit if intervention is found necessary. If the army follows the marines, 5,000 men will be rushed from Newport News, Va. Five transports are held ready for their embarkation.

FOSS GETS CUSUMANO PLEA TODAY

Attorneys Backed by Whole of State in Fight for Woman; Mascioli to Die in Chair It Is Declared—To Tell of Case.

Enrico Mascioli, under sentence of death with Mrs. Lena Cusumano for the murder of the woman's husband, was taken secretly by automobile, from the Plymouth Jail to the death house at Charlestown early today.

The object of the secret transfer of the prisoner was to avoid any possible attack by persons hostile to Mascioli.

The murderer was lodged in cell No. 1, the same cell which Phelps and Richards occupied.

The start from Plymouth was at 4 o'clock. In the party were Sheriff Henry F. Porter and Deputies Kurt T. Blake, Joseph Collingwood and John Condon, guarding the prisoner. They traveled in Collingwood's machine. The route followed was through Whitman to Boston, and at 7 o'clock, when Plymouth newspaper men were notified, the prisoner had been lodged in his cell at Charlestown.

The petition for clemency for Mrs. Lena Cusumano, convicted of complicity in the murder of her husband, Frank Cusumano, at Hull, will be presented to Governor Foss today.

It was stated on good authority that Governor Foss will at once present the petition to the Council, on the ground that a woman should not be executed.

No strong stand will be made to save Enrico Mascioli, said to be the principal in the murder, it appears from a statement given out by Attorney Thomas J. Grady. Attorney Grady said:

"Mrs. Cusumano lied on the witness stand. But she did it under threat from Enrico Mascioli. She feared him, and so kept the secret of the murder."

This is taken as an admission of the guilt of Mascioli. Attorney Grady will prove that the woman was convicted unfairly.

"We make no appeal to sentiment in this case," said Attorney Grady. "We simply present our evidence and submit our plea to the fairness of the Governor and Council."

It is understood that a formal petition for the commutation of Mascioli's sentence may be filed, but the fight, both by the attorneys and by the friends of women throughout the State, who have taken an interest in the matter, will be centered on freeing the woman.

Attorney Grady also raised the point of the legality of counting a woman in the death house. His statement in full is as follows:

"If they attempt to bring this woman to the State Prison I shall immediately go before the Superior Court and question the legality of Governor Bridge's right to hire women as guards.

Allow no Women Guards.

"The law expressly states that the employes of the State Prison shall come under the civil service rules and I find that there is no civil list pertaining to women being retained at the prison which has been posted at the State House.

"In our application for clemency we shall declare that Mrs. Cusumano was unfairly convicted on the evidence which was presented.

"We do not wish to appeal to the sympathies of the people, and that will not enter into our plea. We shall only go before the

"Just Snorting" Is Latest Gem of Wellesley Speech

A Little Conversation Among Students Reveals Unsuspected Beauties of the College Tongue.

Two Wellesley College girls chattered on a settee in Wellesley railroad station today.

Enter third Wellesley College girl.

First W. C. G.—Are you going to Boston?

Third W. C. G.—Yes.

Second W. C. G.—Well, that's GLORIOUSLY WONDERFUL.

Another girl came tripping by. The three other girls admired the newcomer's suit tremendously. Finally the first W. C. G. exclaimed: "Isn't that PERFECTLY SNORTING!"

Finally a diminutive girl came by of the type commonly described as a "squab."

Girls on the settee surveyed the squab's small but attractive figure and one exclaimed: "Isn't she CUTEYLY CUTE?"

And yet a recent article in the AMERICAN on Wellesley College slang was condemned by some persons as being overdone.

Mrs. Roberts Faints At Divorce Trial

Mother-in-Law, Witness for Son, Says Doctor's Wife Kicked Her and Abused Her Son.

Mrs. Blanche M. Roberts of Greenbrier street, Dorchester, fainted while her mother-in-law, Mrs. Lillian Roberts of Portland, Me., was testifying against her in the Suffolk Divorce Court today.

Mrs. Roberts was testifying as a witness for her son, Dr. Walter N. Roberts, dentist, of No. 14 Cumberland street, Back Bay. Dr. Roberts seeks divorce on the grounds that his wife has been cruel and abusive to him. She is contesting the suit.

The mother testified that the young woman nagged her husband all the time and often swore at him.

Then she corroborated Dr. Roberts' testimony that his wife had kicked her.

Just then Mrs. Blanche Roberts, who was seated in the bar enclosure by her counsel, fainted and fell from her chair to the floor.

Her eight-year-old daughter Gertrude ran to her crying. Spectators led the child away and carried the unconscious woman to an ante-room.

Dr. Roberts on the witness stand continued his story of ill treatment. He said his wife nagged him so that he left home every morning as soon as possible. That she twice threatened to kill him and that he was afraid to go back to live with her.

WEDS MAN WHOM SHE RESCUED

Love that began at first sight when the young woman leaped into the water and saved him from drowning ended in a wedding for Clarence C. Burgess, an attendant at the Medfield State Asylum, and Miss Marguerite M. Pell of Chestnut street, Woburn. News of the romantic marriage of the couple on Wednesday was made known to their friends today.

Until a week ago Miss Pell was a nurse at the Medfield asylum, where Burgess is employed. She is nineteen and he twenty-three years of age. They had met each other in their work, but it was not until two months ago that their romance started. Both were out boating. The canoe in which Burgess had been paddling capsized and the young man shouted for help.

Rescued Future Husband.

Hearing his cries, Miss Pell paddled her canoe up close and then dived into the water. She is an expert swimmer. She told her friends afterward that saving Burgess' life was easy for her.

"And, say, it was the greatest thing I ever did, for it has won me a husband," she added.

Burgess wooed and won. Some time ago he secured a marriage license in Medfield, and in an hour the entire town knew of it. The gossips reported that the pair had been married.

Their minor came to the ears of the head of the Medfield asylum and he at once called attendant and nurse before him.

"Are you married?" he asked them.

"No, we are not," they truthfully replied.

Wedded in Woburn.

Something was said about the undesirability of having couples getting married while working at the asylum. But Burgess and Miss Pell met secretly and continued the courtship. A week ago the young woman, who is considered beautiful, gave up her job as nurse and went to live with her aunt, Mrs. Clarence Cole of Chestnut street, Woburn. Wednesday was Burgess' day off.

Burgess took the first car for Woburn. "I've come over to marry you," he said to Miss Pell.

"I'm ready," was her reply.

The pair visited Rev. H. W. Mugum at his Woburn home, and after they had secured two witnesses the ceremony was performed.

Burgess formerly lived in Rockport. Mrs. His bride was born in Norwich, N. H.

MUST THE PRICE OF BEER JUMP, TOO?

NEW YORK, May 24.—Brewers are becoming seriously concerned over the small supply of malting barley which has risen to $1.50 and even $2 a bushel, as compared with $1.03 and $1.25 last Fall. Brewers' profits are rapidly approaching the vanishing point. Despite this state of affairs there has been no general advance in the price of lager, as the public insists upon its regulation amount of beer for its nickle "nickel" and the retailer can't take r ofs in the suits of his "schooners" without doing trade. Apparently the only thing for the brewer to do is to turn farmer or violate all precedent by raising the price of beer.

G. H. ROOSEVELT TO BE MARRIED

Harvard is all agog today over the news that has just leaked out to the effect that Gracie H. Roosevelt of New York, a relative of Colonel Roosevelt, is to marry Miss Margaret Robinson, a Boston girl. Young Roosevelt is reported as "out of town," and the Harvard men are preparing a hilarious welcome for him when he ventures out on the campus again.

Twins Joined Like Siamese Pair Are Born in Holyoke

Doctors Will Try to Separate the Babies, but Fear Operation May Kill One or Both.

HOLYOKE, May 24.—Twin babies, joined together in the manner of the famous Siamese twins, were born early today in the City Hospital to Mr. and Mrs. John Griggs of this city.

The doctors said with the exception of the joining of the babies the children were perfect. Specialists are to be called to see if it is possible by operation to separate the babies. The impression of the doctors was that such an operation would be likely to prove fatal to one if not both of the little ones. The ligament that connects the children extends from the lower part of their backs.

SIX CANDIDATES IN FIELD AT BROOKLINE ELECTION ON TODAY

A spirited contest for the office of selectman in Brookline is being fought today at the special election to name a man to take the place left by the death of Horace James, who had served the town for nearly one-half a century.

Shortly after the selectmen announced the date of the special election many nomination papers were taken out and spirited campaigns have been conducted.

The contestants are Albion F. Bemis, former member of the Governor's Council, a member of the town's committee of thirty for many years; James F. Quinn, who was a candidate at the citizens' caucus last February and lost by a small vote to Paxson Dana; B. Frank Carroll, a contractor, living in the Village section, Dr. Frederick L. Hayes of the Coolidge Corner section, Hosea Starr Ballou of the Reservoir section and Thomas F. Thompson.

This is the first special election called to fill a vacancy on the board since 1906. The vote today will, it is expected, be a large one.

OBSERVE BIRTHDAY OF QUEEN VICTORIA

Today was the anniversary of the birth of the late Queen Victoria. The event was observed on every British ship in the harbor. The vessels were decorated with bunting and flags and tonight the crews will celebrate. Ships on which the day was observed were the Laconia, Parisian, Canadian, Armenian, Kingstonian and others.

Wedding at Bourne Tomorrow

Young Garland for Best Man

$10,000,000 Is Forgotten Now

MRS. JAMES A. GARLAND, THE DEVOTED MOTHER.

Mrs. Garland, who is to wed Francis Cushing Greene tomorrow is greatly devoted to her children. The photograph, taken some years ago, shows her holding one of her sons.

Simple Saturday Ceremony to Unite Mrs. Garland and Sweetheart of Childhood Days.

The pretty village of Bourne, down on the Buzzards Bay shore, is in gay anticipation of the nuptials tomorrow of Mrs. "Jimmy" Garland, who gives up $10,000,000 to wed Francis Cushing Green, her schoolday sweetheart.

This will be Mrs. Garland's third marriage, but to her second husband. This apparent contradiction arises from the fact that, as Miss Marie Louise Tudor, she was married to James A. Garland, they were divorced and then re-married. The happiness of their second marriage was halted by Mr. Garland's death.

All preparations have been made at Mrs. Garland's home. Telegrams of congratulations have begun to arrive.

The village of Bourne is greatly interested in the marriage. It is not unlikely that the admiring villagers will serenade the bridal couple.

The ceremony tomorrow is to be simple. Only the immediate relatives will be present. These will include the bride's five children and her brothers and sisters.

There will be no bridesmaids or maid-of-honor. Mr. Garland will be "attended," as to speak, by her oldest son, James A. Garland.

Francis Cushing Green, whom Mrs. Garland prefers to the income of $10,000,000,

CLARK MANAGER SAYS SPEAKER WILL WIN ON THE FIRST BALLOT

MINNEAPOLIS, May 24. "We are going to nominate Champ Clark on the first ballot and we are going to do it with remarkably little money. We have had $20,000 to date. I have had a clean check upon everything and I shall welcome the opportunity to publish our campaign expenditures."

This is the substance of a statement made here today by Fred T. Dubois of Idaho, manager of Clark's national campaign.

"We have 398 Clark delegates already elected," the statement continues, "and at the conventions yet to be held we are certain to get 122 more.

"Mr. Dubois concedes 210 votes to Wilson, 108 to Underwood, 45 to Harmon, 30 to Marshall, 14 to Baldwin and 10 to Burke."

CUT THIS OUT AND MAIL TO GOV. FOSS

To His Excellency, Governor Foss and the Honorable Executive Council of Massachusetts:

You are hereby petitioned by the residents of this State whose names are undersigned to exercise the power of clemency invested in you and commute the death sentence of Mrs. Lena Cusumano, convicted of murder in Plymouth County, to life imprisonment.

We ask this because the condemned prisoner is a WOMAN and a MOTHER. No woman has been put to death by the State in half a century. No woman should be executed in this State.

The electrocution of Mrs. Cusumano would be a lasting disgrace to Massachusetts, and we believe that the whole State feels strongly that her life should be saved.

Fight for Mrs. Cusumano Admits Guilt of Mascioli

Present Plea for Commutation to Governor Foss Today; May Seek Habeas Corpus.

Council with such evidence as shall tend to show that the woman has been used unjustly.

Mrs. Cusumano lied on the witness stand because she knew she was not guilty and thought, in her ignorant way she would be set free. She feared Enrico Mascioli, and because of this fear kept the murder secret and housed Mascioli. It is on this ground we are seeking commutation. We are going to make a big fight. We shall make public the whole inside of this case. We believe it is our duty. Attorney W. J. Coughlin of Abington, my colleague, is agreed to this. He defended Mascioli. We want the truth to become known.

Says Women Will Guard.

Prison Commissioner Frederick Pettigrove said that women guards would watch Mrs. Cusumano when she is taken to the death cell, in spite of the declaration of her attorney. He said:

"I doubt if the courts would sustain a writ of habeas corpus on the grounds that the statutes will not admit the employment of women guards. We will have the women there when the time comes."

Warden Bridges stated that the statutes providing for the execution of a prisoner did not specify the necessity of any female assistants, but they would secure some women as watchers of Mrs. Cusumano, if they had to get matrons from some of the county institutions. He said:

"So far Sheriff Porter has held the woman at the jail out of courtesy, but when the time comes for her being brought here we will have women guards to look after her. There will probably be an attendant, a woman, present when she is electrocuted. I guess there will be no trouble."

"I cannot believe that the authorities will electrocute a woman," says Mrs. Florence E. Spooner.

"For the State to legally kill a mother seems to me the height of profane action. This woman, sinner or saint, has peopled the earth with her three souls, and to electrocute her would tend to increase the awful offence of capital punishment.

"Both Should be Saved."

"Both Mrs. Cusumano and Mascioli should be saved from the chair, but more especially should clemency be accorded to Mrs. Cusumano because she is a mother. Of course I have always stood for the abolition of the death penalty regardless of sex, but from a standpoint of chivalry alone, I cannot conceive of a man executioner sending this woman to her death before God's own good time for her to die.

"The execution of a woman would establish a terrible precedent and would be the greatest mockery of this age and civilization.

"I will confess that I am quite out of patience with these people who jump up at the eleventh hour before an execution and demand that the execution be called off. Now that the papers have announced that Mrs. Cusumano and Mascioli are to die within a week or two, a great many very much alarmed people are calling on and writing to the Governor asking him to intercede.

"If these good people who are asking that Mrs. Cusumano be allowed to live and explate her sins are really sincere they will appear at the next legislative hearing on capital punishment and work from that end to strike the law from the records, so that none of these distressing controversies will be held just a few days previous to the scheduled executions."

Rev. Spooner said there are thousands of women who have signed a petition to the Governor that the sentence of death might be commuted.

In 1887, Mrs. Sarah Robinson, who was convicted of murder by poison of several persons in an attempt to get the insurance money, had her sentence commuted, and the Council ordered her sent to the State Prison for life. The following day the Council again met and ordered her sent to Cambridge. Later on another meeting of the Council was held and Mrs Robinson was sent to the Lowell Jail to serve her sentence. This, Mrs. Cusumano's attorneys point out, shows the illegality of the right of the warden of the prison to receive the murderess.

State-Wide Protest.

The protest against the execution of Mrs. Cusumano has assumed remarkable proportions

Rev. Ida Hultin, a Unitarian minister of Sudbury, and one of the delegates to the Unitarian convention which has met in Boston for the past week, is very urgent that something be done to save a woman from electrocution, as she has been sent to the electric chair by a jury of men. She hopes that the time is not far distant when women will have something to say about the punishment of their sex.

Rev. Mary A. Leggett, a Unitarian minister of Revere and a lecturer against capital punishment, is very earnest in her protest against the electrocution of a woman.

"For many years I have been an opponent of capital punishment and have often preached against it," said Miss Leggett. "I am not now reopening this question because a woman is concerned, but because the question is directly before the public and they should study it carefully.

Attacks Death Penalty.

"We are now living in an era when we are changing our methods of rendering punishment. There was a time in this State when people were hanged for other crimes besides murder. If you will look back fifty years you will see what those crimes were, and we would not tolerate such punishment today. So I think that we ought to look carefully at this matter of doing out punishment.

"Capital punishment is nothing but vengeance. While the State should punish the wrongdoer, let our punishment be of that kind that is calculated to reform the criminal.

"Capital punishment is not a deterrent of crime.

"Putting people into prison for life is a more corrective punishment for the murderer than capital punishment.

"The time is coming when to abolish capital punishment we are saving the State the crime of committing a murder in its own name.

Rev. Elbert Judson Padgham of Rutherford, N. J., also a delegate to the Unitarian Convention, was very emphatic in her protest against capital punishment.

URGE GUILD FOR CRANE'S PLACE

Curtis Guild, ambassador to Russia and former Governor of Massachusetts, may resign Russia and the United States senatorship from Massachusetts gone over at length.

Ambassador Guild's call upon his chief followed a dinner with Senator Crane. To-night the Ambassador dines with Senator Lodge and then comes to Boston.

He plans a short stay here and intends to sail for Europe June 4. Republicans close to Ambassador Guild believe, however, that he will formally announce his willingness to accept the United States senatorship, and start at once on an aggressive campaign.

In that event he would relinquish his post at St. Petersburg and remain in Massachusetts.

Today's conference with Secretary of State Knox may make it possible for Guild to announce his candidacy for the Senate when he reaches Boston tomorrow.

Would Like the Honor.

"I cannot say yet," the ambassador declared in Washington today, "that I will be a candidate. Yes, I'd like the honor and be proud of it. But there are matters which I have begun with Russia that should be adjusted and then I want time to confer with leaders among Massachusetts Republicans. I'll study the situation in the State as soon as I reach Boston."

Lieutenant-Governor Luce would not be a candidate for the Senate if Ambassador Guild should decide to allow the use of his name. Neither would former Governor John L. Bates. The entire list of probable Republican candidates would have a thorough thinning out if Curtis Guild should decide to be a candidate.

The Ambassador has not been involved in the Taft-Roosevelt Reactionary-Progressive internal dissensions of the Republican party. His absence in Russia while the conflict between the two wings of his party raged here kept him away from the warring elements. He was not called upon to take sides. He is a personal friend of Roosevelt's and enjoys the marked confidence of President Taft.

Believe He Will Run.

Already the attitude of prominent Republicans indicates that Ambassador Guild's answer will be that he is willing to make the running. Committees are being formed there will appear at the next legislative hearing on capital punishment and work from that end to strike the law from the records, so that none of these distressing controversies will be held just a few days previous to the scheduled executions."

STUDENTS MADE TO CLIMB STICKY GATE

NEW HAVEN, Ct., May 24.—Members of the three senior secret societies at Yale were locked out of their rooms today by students of the senior class not members of the fraternities, and were forced to submit to taunts and jeers outside the gates at the entrance to Vanderbilt Hall on the campus, while those inside the enclosure danced around a big bonfire on which was piled furniture, bedding and any other material which came handy. The fraternity men, after futile attempts to enter their dormitories by ladders placed at the windows, were forced to climb over the iron gate, which had been covered with thick grease. Frederick S. Jones asked the men to desist, but no attention was paid to his request.

BUILDING TRADES MEN IN NEW BODY

Four of the big unions eligible to membership today announced they will not take part in the reorganization of the Boston Building Trades Department tonight. The changes were decided on at a conference of leading labor officials here six days ago. Under a plan by these progressives an independent Allied Building Trades Council has been formed outside the Federation of Labor. Edward J. McGivern, international vice president of the Operative Plasterers' Union, is president.

KENTUCKIANS FEAR NIGHT RIDERS AGAIN

FRANKFORT, Ky., May 24.—Imminent danger of another night rider outbreak in the "Black Patch" of western Kentucky is threatened, according to information received by Governor McCreary, who is taking active steps to suppress the lawless tobacco beasts. The State has offered a reward of $400 for the arrest and conviction of anyone guilty of scraping tobacco plant beds.

FORBID NEGROES TO USE NAME OF "ELKS"

ALBANY, N. Y., May 24.—Negro Elks have no right to use the name of "Elks" and are restrained in an injunction which the New York Court of Appeals today sustained.

Forgive Archduke Who Gave Up Rank to Wed

Ferdinand Charles of Austria, Who Married Professor's Daughter, Reinstated.

VIENNA, May 24.—The Archduke Ferdinand Charles, who renounced his rank and titles two years ago to marry the beautiful Bertha Czuber, the daughter of a professor in the Vienna University, and assumed the name of Charles Burg, has been pardoned and reinstated in his rank. His wife will receive the title of countess.

It is generally believed the archduke was secretly married to Fraulein Czuber as long ago as 1904, but the formal announcement was made only two years ago.

The archduke was specially interested in engineering and he met Fraulein Czuber at the technical high school here.

The girl was only sixteen, but the youth, only three years her senior, found there were love and life in love with her and gave up everything for her sake.

Bowne to Sue Eloping Wife

Mrs. Mott Forgives Husband

New York Millionaire Admits His Wife Has Fled Across Sea With Ex-Harvard Man.

MRS. WALTER BOWNE.

Walter Bowne, millionaire of Flushing, L. I., today admitted that it is his wife who has fled with Jordan Lawrence Mott, 3d, formerly of Harvard.

Bowne is not surprised at his wife's action, he declares. He will at once apply for a divorce.

Mrs. Mott, meanwhile, who was the daughter of Professor Charles A. Pitkin of Thayer Academy, South Braintree, will not ask a divorce. For the last nine years she has lived with her father-in-law, helping his attempts to reclaim young Mott from his wild oats sowing. She is willing to forgive, and believes Mott's actions are simply the result of his temperament.

Bowne, a member of one of the wealthiest families in Flushing, admitted that his beautiful young wife in the woman employed as stewardess now aboard the British freighter Indrados with Mott. Mott is a grandson of the millionaire founder of the Mott Iron Works.

"Of course there is nothing now for me to do but to obtain a divorce," said Mr. Bowne calmly, but very sadly. He is a man of about forty years, of quiet, frank of speech, massively built and tall. He spoke of his wife with a pitying kindness.

Married Eight Years.

"We were married in the West eight years ago," he said. "My wife was then on the stage. I brought her to my Eastern home, L. I., place, and we entered into the social life there. Mott was one of my acquaintances. I introduced him to my wife. That must have been five years ago.

"Two years ago I bought for my wife an estate at Millington, N. J., and we went there to live, but within a year she left me and went back to the stage. It was her artistic temperament—the impulsive nature that made the trouble.

"I have reason to believe that Mott pursued her after she left me—that he followed her company through Pennsylvania. The company's season closed about two weeks ago in Pottsville, Pa."

According to the latest advices, the Indrados, a clumsy, lumbering freighter, is on her way to Gibraltar.

The speedy Mauretania and the Kronprins Wilhelm, also on their way across the Atlantic, carry passengers who are armed with money, authority and determination to take young Mott off the Indrados at Gibraltar.

What they expect to do concerning the beautiful young woman who is also aboard the freight ship—who, in fact, is registered as its stewardess, while Mott is its purser—does not yet appear.

Deep as is the chagrin of the young husband of the vanished woman, the indignation and sorrow of the parents of the fugitive young man seem to be deep.

Mott is well and widely known as a writer of adventure fiction. His tales have been of the "red blood" school. But he never wrote a fiction story to equal the complicated facts of the story which he is now living.

Breaks With Father.

After a good many years of pretty gay life, the young man came to a final break with his father some time ago. His credit was cut off and he declared angrily that he would make his own living.

His father told him that was what he would have to do, as the paternal purse strings were forever closed, but the elder Mr. Mott quietly engaged the services of Hector Fuller, globe trotter and war correspondent, and urged him to do everything in his power, without regard to expense, to straighten the young man up. He is now determined to kidnap Mott if necessary and return him to his parents.

Fuller made arrangements to go on a cruise to the Far East with Mott. But it seems that the latter's infatuation for the beautiful Mrs. Bowne made him refuse the pleasures of the long sea voyage with his friend.

Fuller, on a compromise, went to Pilarty, N. C., with Mott. The Motts have a large estate there. To the astonishment of the staid neighbors a young woman appeared there about two weeks ago—about the time Mrs. Bowne's theatrical company closed its season.

Mott and the woman gave Fuller the slip in New York and shipped as purser and stewardess on the freighter. Fuller is chasing on the Mauretania and the parents are on the Kronprins Wilhelm.

AWARDED $4,500 FOR QUINCY BOY'S DEATH

Martin MacConnell, administrator of the estate of Clyde L. MacConnell, his son, of Quincy, was awarded $4,500 today by a jury in the Civil Session in the Norfolk County Superior Court in Dedham against the Bay State Street Railway Company. Two suits were heard, the first for $12,000 for the death of the boy and the second for $15,000 for suffering incurred. Connell was awarded $4,000 in the first and $500 in the second suit. The boy was killed on Sea street, Quincy, on October 10, 1909, while walking beside the track with his father.

LARGEST CITY HOSPITAL CLASS

The graduating exercises of the class of 1912 of the City Hospital Training School for Nurses will take place today in the Surgical Amphitheatre of the hospital. The class this year is the largest ever graduated from the institution since the establishment of the training school, there being thirty-six members.

Dr. Charles M. Green of No. 78 Marlboro street, a member of the hospital staff, will give the address to the graduates and Dr. John D. McCollom, superintendent of the institution, will present the diplomas.

Following the exercises in the amphitheatre, a reception will be held in the Vose House from 3 until 6 o'clock.

The graduates, Miss Mabel H. Arnold, Annie R. Barclay, Margaret Beaton, Beatrice M. Bedard, Margaret A. Brankick, Frances M. Burgess, Mary F. Carberry, Rose A. Cunningham, Emily G. Donovan, May E. MRS. GRACE FREED ON $5,000 CASH BAIL

ATLANTA, May 24.—Mrs. Daisy Ulrich Grace, indicted on a charge of drugging and shooting her young husband, has been released from Atlanta jail on $5,000 bail.

The bond was signed by Chess Logmarsino, a wealthy real estate owner. Mrs. Grace expects soon to become a mother, and Logomarsino volunteered to furnish the bond out of sympathy.

Mrs. Grace has been in jail since her indictment several weeks ago. She has been unable to give bond because professional bondsmen demanded a heavy fee and security against loss.

She was prevented from giving this security through her husband's refusal to sign papers permitting her to pledge property in which he holds an interest under Pennsylvania laws.

Grace is still paralyzed from the waist down and not expected to live.

SCHWAB RESCUES MAN FROM CREEK

THREE KINGS AT ROYAL FUNERAL

COPENHAGEN, May 24.—For the first time in ten centuries the Kings of Denmark, Norway and Sweden met today on friendly terms, the occasion being the burial of the late King Frederick VIII. of Denmark, who died suddenly in the streets of Hamburg. After the funeral King Christian, the new Danish monarch, King Haakon of Norway and King Gustav of Sweden dined together.

About 2,000 nobles were present at the obsequies which were held in the Roskilde Cathedral. Many royal and noble houses of Europe were represented. The interment was in the royal tomb of Roskilde Cathedral. Simplicity marked the ceremonies in accordance with the wish of the dead King.

Special choral services by the royal opera singers and by the students of the choral union were given. The interior of the cathedral was draped in black and white. The body of Frederick had been lying in state in the private chapel of Christiansborg castle since last Monday, and had been viewed by thousands. In the cathedral today the coffin was draped with the royal mantle of red velvet, wrought with a magnificent gold crown. The historic silver pall of Rosenborg castle rested beneath the coffin on the black catafalque. Hundreds of wreaths were placed about the casket.

Among the mourners were Dowager Queen Alexandra of England and Dowager Empress Marie of Russia, sisters of the dead King.

He-Suffragists Come Back at the "Antis"

"Ballot Should Be Granted as Equity and Expediency," They Say in Reply.

The Massachusetts Men's League for Woman Suffrage—otherwise known as the He-Suffragists—comes back today at the Men's Association Against Extension of Suffrage—otherwise known as the He-Anti-Suffragists.

The He-Anti-Suffragists, in a recent statement, explained why, to their way of thinking, women should not be allowed to vote.

The Massachusetts Men's League for Woman Suffrage, at its annual meeting, elected Edwin D. Mead as president, filled the remaining offices, then framed a categorical answer to all the statements made by the organization which is against women voting.

The He-Suffragists take eleven statements of the He-Antis and give eleven answers, followed by a summary. The opening sentence of the summary reads: "The ballot should be granted to women on grounds both of equity and of expediency."

The He-Suffragists also voted to institute an energetic campaign for members. This may indicate a battle royal between the two organizations for membership. Men not affiliated with one or the other may expect to be canvassed soon.

PRESBYTERIANS BAR WOMEN PREACHERS

LOUISVILLE, May 24.—Women will not be allowed to preach in Presbyterian pulpits. This was decided by the Presbyterian assembly when an overture was read bringing up the question. The vote was almost unanimous against women occupying pulpits.

HARVARD CLUBS TO MEET IN NEW YORK

On Friday and Saturday, June 15 and 16, the sixteenth annual meeting of the Associated Harvard Clubs will be held in New York. The first day will be devoted to the business of the association. In the evening will come the annual dinner at the Hotel Astor, with President Lowell as the guest of honor.

On Saturday morning a trip will be made by boat to West Point.

PRESIDENT $29,510 RICHER IN A YEAR

CINCINNATI, May 24.—President Taft's return to the Board of Review on his personal property shows a total of $74,950 and includes a $1,000 horse, a $100 watch, a $1,000 piano, $5,650 cash in the bank, and $68,000 of other personal property and investments.

Last year his total return was $45,440, so that the President in this year $29,510 richer than he was last year.

OLD TIME REMEDY DARKENS THE HAIR. DANDRUFF AND FALLING HAIR STOPPED

For generations Sage and Sulphur have been used for hair and scalp troubles. Almost everyone knows the value of such a combination for keeping the hair a good even color, for curing dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair, and for promoting the growth of the hair. Years ago the only way to get a Hair Tonic of this kind was to make it in the home, which was troublesome and not always satisfactory. Nowadays, almost any up-to-date druggist can supply his patrons with a ready-to-use product, skillfully prepared in perfectly equipped laboratories.

An ideal preparation of this sort is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, in which Sage and Sulphur are combined with other valuable remedies for scalp troubles and thin, weak hair that is losing its color or coming out. After using this remedy for a few days, you will notice the color gradually coming back, your scalp will feel better, the dandruff will soon be gone, and in less than a month's time there will be a wonderful difference in your hair.

Don't neglect your hair if it is full of dandruff, losing its color or coming out. Get a fifty cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, and see what a few days' treatment will do for you. All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented.

The Men's Clothing Season Is a FAILURE Through Unseasonable Weather and a Nation-Wide Business Depression

I Am Facing the Crisis of My Business Career

I simply MUST have CASH Georges

NOT only have I given up all hope of a penny's profit on this season's business, but I have resigned myself to take an enormous loss from now on. Usual competition, I welcome—but the weather man has me on the run.

I cannot stand the gaff any longer. My success is absolutely dependent upon the quick selling of the GEORGES MODEL CLOTHES produced daily in high grade custom tailoring shops throughout the country. With 21 days of rain in Boston during April, and a likelihood of even more this month, and with conditions in New York, Philadelphia, Providence and Buffalo equally hopeless, you can well understand that my five great stores are loaded to the roof with more than a million dollars' worth of medium and lightweight Suits and Overcoats, half of which should have been in your hands and the cash in mine 30 days ago.

I am face to face with the most serious crisis I have ever confronted—nor am I alone in this respect. Scores of concerns are today on the verge of actual FAILURE—but they are trying to suppress the real state of their affairs. I have the courage and honesty to come out openly and tell the public of my predicament, because I know that men who would put off buying a $15.00 suit for example, although it be a splendid value, will quickly snap up that same suit, when marked as I have marked all of mine, at $9.50, and that means cash for me—and my present condition makes this the one and only consideration I dare think of. I'm game to the core, I'll cheerfully take my medicine, and if there's the slightest doubt of this please witness the tremendous sacrifice I am making.

Yesterday's crowds told the story—today and Saturday will surpass all sales records at GEORGES, for men are judging this event by those that have made me famous in the past. All my old customers, and every other man who values the power of his dollars, will take advantage of these truly remarkable values.

Here's the Bulletin of the Suit & Overcoat Reductions

$13.50 and $15.00	$9.50
$16.50 and $18.00	12.50
$20.00 and $22.50	14.50
$25.00 and $28.00	17.50
$30.00 and $35.00	19.50
$37.50 and $40.00	21.50

Out of many thousands of two and three-piece Suits and Lightweight Overcoats we briefly describe 4 Examples of Value

A Brief History of GEORGES

"Nothing Succeeds Like Success" and I Am Successful

AWAY back in 1879 I originated the sale of Merchant Tailors' uncalled for garments. But with the opening of more stores the demand soon exceeded the supply. Then I conceived the idea, out of which grew GEORGES FAMOUS MODEL CLOTHES, fashioned by the most famous custom style creators in the country. I am obliged to take a certain contracted number of such garments each day, in addition to the output of my own custom shops in New York. This number is based on an anticipated increase in the business of all my five stores—that's why, at a time like this, of such hopeless weather and business conditions, I am hit harder than the stores selling ready-mades.

These GEORGES MODEL CLOTHES, which I regularly sell at $15 to $40, are absolutely distinctive in every line from ready-mades, a full year ahead in style, actually equalling Merchant Tailors' finest $30 to $75 products.

The severe losses I am taking necessitate charging for alterations at cost

Rain Coats

I AM not a so-called Specialty Raincoat Store, but I carry one of the largest stocks, not alone in Boston, but in all the cities where I am located. I have every style imaginable—prices range $5 to $25. Not alone men's coats, but a number of man-nish models for women. The $5 and $6 rubber lined raincoats I carried over from last season go in this sale at $2

Georges Conservative Suit Model

Sack suit, style 3-button, short rolling lapel. Shoulders medium. The back of coat drapes perfectly straight with centre vent. Vest and trousers in keeping with coat. Color Oxford gray, material of soft unfinished velour. The equal of any Thirty Dollar made-to-order. Specially designed by one of New York's fashion creators to meet the demand of the quiet dresser. Our former price $15. To raise cash, now reduced to $9.50

A Georges Norfolk Model

The style cycle has again turned to the Norfolk; and keen Americans of the younger class are welcoming the return of this clever style suit. One we specially mention is fine soft finished serge, color "Electric Blue." The pleated and belted effect is entirely distinctive from Ready-made, and if built to your measure would cost you at least Forty Dollars. Our former price $22.50. Now reduced to $14.50

Odd Trousers

EVERY man should possess a couple of pairs. I've taken all my striped Worsteds and Serge Trousers, also my new model Flannels, in plain white and gray and fancy stripes that should bring me $5 and $6 — and have slashed them to $3.50

For the convenience of those who cannot call during the day, and desire an early selection, store will be open tonight, Friday, till 9 P. M.; Saturday till 10:30.

Mrs. Garland Plans New Life

"Farmers Rest of Our Days"

Fiance Calls Widow "Finest Little Farmer in the Country."

is her attorney and has managed her estate since Mr Garland's death.

By the terms of the Garland will the widow will forfeit the income of $10,000,000 if she marries again. Mrs. Garland says with simple sincerity:

"I am marrying for love. Money isn't everything and love is pretty nearly."

BRIDE AND GROOM "TO BE FARMERS REST OF DAYS," THEY SAY

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Everything's buzzing along beautifully down on the Cape, where on Saturday the all-important wedding, that of Mrs. James A. Garland and Mr. Green, is to take place. The country there is at its best. The orchards are gay with apple blossoms, the lilacs and tulips are in bloom and the trees all bursting forth in their greenest-green to herald the oncoming of Summer. It's in the rambling white house tucked in among the hills and the apple blossoms that this wonderful wedding, which is interesting the whole country, is to take place. But from the simple simplicity of the preparations one would never dream that it meant any more to an event than the eating of a course dinner.

"We tend the simple life up here, and there is to be no more fuss about the wedding than about anything else. It will be as simple and quiet as it's possible to make it," Francis Cushing Green, the prospective bridegroom, said.

And the truth of the matter is that the villagers are far more excited over the event than the principals themselves. The farm work goes along just the same as ever.

"Pigs is pigs" for sure down on the Cape, and surer than that this Garland farm, where the beautiful mistress of millions—so much a mistress of riches that she can afford to throw them away for a mere mess—is raising pigs by the wholesale and trying hard to sell them.

"Farmers Rest of Our Days."

"Did you sell those pigs to that man on your way back to the station yesterday?" was about the first question the prospective bridegroom of this fair lady asked me when I again made my appearance at the Garland estate at Bourne, as his eyes gleamed with fun.

I had to confess that I hadn't, but was willing to make a bargain, so I agreed to sell every pig on the place for him if he would manage to let me get a picture of Mrs. Garland. Really, I suppose the poor lady may need the money when she gets through throwing what she has about in such a reckless fashion.

But there was no bargain to be driven. He laughed back at me. "Mrs. Garland really isn't at home and I don't think I should let you do it if she were, and I'm positive she'd hate some very decided opinions upon the subject herself."

But back to the pigs.

"Does Mrs. Garland really take a personal interest in the raising of the pigs and chickens and horses and cows and all the rest of the stuff?" I asked.

"Yes, indeed, she's the finest little farmer in the country, and there really isn't much about farming that she doesn't know. We are both exceptionally fond of country life and expect to be farmers the rest of our days."

I started to ask how he thought his crops would pan out this year and if the potatoes were especially fine, but just then he started to tell me of how he had scared a reporter away the evening before by telling him over the phone that they raised an especially fine crop of dogs up there—a fierce kind, and let them roam about loose. "The reporter didn't appear," he concluded.

But I knew the answer before he told me.

Modest About Photograph.

"I'm sure that everything has been in the papers that really need go in. We're really very quiet people up here, and all we ask is to be allowed to live our lives as we see fit."

"Didn't you tell me yesterday that the wedding was to be in the house—which did you say, house or church?" I asked, trying my best to remember.

"Well, perhaps on Saturday at about 4:30 you'd better go down and wait at the church," but there was that gleam of mischief dancing about his eyes, and finally, when he saw that I really believed him and was alarmed at having misquoted him, he laughed and relented. "No, it's to be at the house," he volunteered by way of amendment.

Just then he spied the photographer making the best of his opportunities.

"Miss Elliott, would you mind asking him not to take any pictures? We both object very seriously to the picture proposition. Now I've told you all I know, won't you do that much for me?"

"But if I do I may lose my job," I said, very, very thoughtfully, and, oh, so sadly.

"Then you can come up here and we'll give you a job raising chickens," he promised.

I promised then to do all in my power, and forthwith begged the photographer to cease. He refused, and after pleading with him again, I stepped into whatever it was we rode up there in—something like a hack—and rode off in high fury. When I looked back he was still snapping.

I presume Mr. Green thinks me an ungrateful wretch, but this much I can say of him—he's a fine, honest, sincere, manly man, and worth any number of millions. May they both live long and prosper!

FRANCIS C. GREEN

The photograph shows Mr. Green in farming togs on estate at Bourne.

BURNS GOING TO DARROW TRIAL

LOS ANGELES, May 24.—Detective William J. Burns is expected here within a few days. It is generally supposed he is coming to the trial of Clarence S. Darrow, accused of bribing a talesman in the McNamara case, but the prosecution refuses to say that he will be called as a witness. The trial is still delayed by a futile attempt to select the thirteenth, or alternate, juror.

John L. Wheat, the last man on the panel, was under examination by the defence, with every indication he would qualify as the needed juror, when court adjourned.

Detective Foster of the National Erectors' Association, who is said to have arranged the plan by which Darrow was alleged to have been trapped by means of a telephone device, is here and probably will be one of the State's chief witnesses. Wholesale attempts at bribery will be charged.

PICTURE CLEW IN JEWAR CASE

The police today resumed their search to learn the identity of the person who accompanied Lillian Jewar to her apartments at the Hotel Baldwin on Friday night, when she is supposed to have been murdered.

A partial clew has been obtained through a half pint whiskey bottle, bought in a Columbus avenue store and found in the apartments. The proprietors of the store remember the dead woman as one of their customers, but do not recall that she visited the place on Friday. Today photographs of men whom the police have under suspicion will be taken to this store to see if the clerks can identify them as customers on Friday.

The body is at the City Hospital morgue, unclaimed. It is though that relatives will appear today.

CARNEGIE'S OLD SERVANT, 'MAGGIE,' GIVEN PENSION

NEW YORK, May 24.—Andrew Carnegie with his family, is at sea today on his way to Scotland for the Summer. Before his departure he bade farewell to Maggie Anderson, one of his old servants, who has a record of twenty-five years of service. Among the parting gifts from the Laird of Skibo to the old woman were a gold watch, a round trip ticket to San Francisco, a farewell ball, and a pension of $500 a year.

The occasion was made a gala one in the servants' hall at the Fifth avenue mansion, the Carnegie family participating in the function, and being no small part of it.

Miss Anderson announced some time since she was going to open a public house in Edinburgh. That is her home town, but the only living member of her family is a brother out in San Francisco.

In the servants' hall were gathered all the help of the big mansion at eight o'clock. The haughty Jeems of the upper hall condescended to lend his dignity to the occasion and beam on simple Sandy from the stables. The housemaid fraternized with the cook, the butler with the groom. It was a truly harmonious family gathering.

Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie and their daughter Margaret, still in her teens, and the idol of servants' hall, and Andrew Carnegie, the sister of Mrs. Carnegie, were all present. The laird presented the watch to the blushing and a fit illustrated Maggie, and expressed the regrets of the family at her leaving.

The servants presented the departing Maggie with a gold bangle. Dancing followed. Two of the footmen of the Carnegie household are violinists—fifteen, the servants call them—and a friend of the domestic part of the household is an expert with the bagpipes.

To the music of the fiddles and the pipes, they whirled through the mazes of Scotch reels and stepped off the Highland Fling. There were waltzes, lancers, polkas, schottisches and quadrilles.

The family remained for three dances and Miss Margaret and Miss Whitfield graced the dance to the delight of all. Finally the servants all said bood-bye to Maggie, while the fiddles and the pipes played "Auld Lang Syne."

Carnegie obeys orders from "the missus" just like any other good husband in America. He got one before sailing for Europe. The ironmaster was standing on deck talking to reporters with his hat off. Along came his secretary and said:

"Sir, I have been asked to instruct you to put on your hat."

"What!" exclaimed the Laird of Skibo, rather indignantly.

"To put on your hat," repeated the imperturbable secretary.

"Instructed! Humph!" said the millionaire demurely. "By whom?"

"Your wife," said the secretary. Defiance and indignation straightway gave place to humility and obedience with Mr. Carnegie. He put on his hat, laughed rather sheepishly, and said:

"Oh, that's different. You see, I married an American woman. American women must be obeyed. It's a good plan to obey them, too, because they are generally right."

Mr. Carnegie was in excellent spirits before he sailed and talked freely on various subjects.

He didn't like the Taft-Roosevelt fight, but sympathized with Mr. Taft, and was grieved to think the colonel was trying to oust his former friend.

"Don't talk politics, please," said the ironmaster. "But then I never despair of a republic. It bears a charmed life, and no doubt will live through this situation."

"To change the subject," said Mr. Carnegie proudly, "do you know that I am going to Aberdeen College to speak? I have been elected Lord Rector there, and consider it a great honor.

"The college has been made famous by a strange thing. Aberdeen students have been charged with acquiring knowledge on oatmeal. That's about so. You know what Samuel Johnson's definition of oatmeal was: 'Oatmeal is food in all civilized countries for horses; in Scotland for men.' Well, Johnson did not like the Scotch, and perhaps there was prejudice in what he said."

"What do you think of the Titanic disaster?" he was asked.

"It was an awful thing," he replied, "but a great good may come of it. As Shakespeare said in 'Henry the Fourth,' 'out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this flower, safety.'"

KITTY GORDON, WHO PLANS TO RE-MARRY CAPTAIN BERESFORD

CHILD REUNITES THE BERESFORDS

NEW YORK, May 24.—Kitty Gordon, called the "most beautiful of English actresses," accompanied by her ten-year-old daughter Vera, is homeward bound to spend the Summer. Before departing she announced to the reporters that she had become reconciled to Captain Henry Beresford, and that he will meet them in Liverpool.

Miss Gordon declared that the constant pleadings of her little daughter had brought back her love for her husband and that the child was coming every hour until the reunion.

It was in December, 1910 that she announced her intention to divorce the Captain. She declared then that she had been planning the divorce for two years. The decree was granted in 1911.

LOWELL POST HAS MAY 30 PLANS READY

LABOR UNION FAVORS "BICYCLE RAILWAY"

The Boston Central Labor Union has endorsed the Boynton "bicycle railway" system, and the bill now before the Legislature to give State credit to establish such a railway between Boston and Fall River. The resolutions compare the cost of $8,000,000 for a single tube of subway with the request for State credit for only $5,000,000 to construct fifty miles of road, under State control.

NEW ELEVATED LINE WILL OPEN JUNE 1

Trial trips are being made daily by the new prepayment, semi-convertible cars, to be run from Harvard Square, by way of Cambridge, over the Elevated structure of the Charles river dam, to the North station, and it is expected that the road will be in readiness for the opening June 1. The running time from the East Cambridge Court House to Scollay square will be less than fifteen minutes.

THE FIRST HAT

By MORTON BIRGE.

Leander J. MacWitty was a common sort of man
In aspect, but his brain was quick and clever.
And his wife would often mention that his powers of invention,
No matter what the test, had failed her never.

The latest thing Leander did—an easy one for him
His wife sent home a hat she thought was nobby.
But she never thought to keep it, merely ponder it and "sleep it,"
And change it—that's the female shopping hobby.

To her distress she found, forsooth, she liked that hat too well,
She'd like it better ev'ry time she'd try it,
Then she put the vexing question to Leander for suggestion,
Her husband simply said: "Why don't you buy it?"

Leander's startled wifey took her husband at his word.
For once she kept the first hat she selected,
She thinks the shrewd Leander is the finest Fate could hand her—
But other women think her mind's affected.

$50 FOR ONE CRAZY THOUGHT

You don't have to be crazy to write a Crazy Thought and win a prize. All you have to do is to act crazy.

The list of the prize-winners for the last week will be printed in next Sunday's AMERICAN. The final list will be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN of June 2.

You know all about the Crazy Thoughts, of course. Everybody's doing them. And there's a fine chance for winning the capital prize of $50.

Think of something that may be all right but which you are glad is not customary—something that has punch and spirit in it and a little humor.

Mail your Crazy Thought to the Crazy Thought Editor, No. 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

Use this form in writing out your thoughts:

It may be all right

BUT

I'm glad it isn't customary

.....

The crazier your thoughts are the better. Remember that. So let them come, remembering the first prize of $50 for the best Crazy Thought. For the next fifty best thoughts there will be fifty prizes of $1 each and, in addition, there will be 150 other prizes.

MOB FOUGHT BACK BY MALDEN MAYOR

Mayor Farrell of Malden fought his way through a crowd of 300, at the corner of Harvard and Bryant streets, Malden, to rescue a young man besieged by the mob in Samuel Salts' grocery store.

The Mayor escorted the man to safety, but was roughly handled in the process. No sanitary was the young man to escape that he forget to give his name to his rescuer.

DIVIDENDS OF WHITE STAR 50 PER CENT.

LONDON, May 24.—The gigantic profits gained from the Atlantic passenger service is shown by the report of the Oceanic Steam Navigation Company, which runs the White Star Line. The report states that dividends amounting to £50,000 pounds ($2,250,000) was paid to shareholders during the year. As the capital is only 750,000 pounds, the dividends amount to 50 per cent.

PHYSICIAN IS VERY CONFIDENT

Dr. Charles Dean Gray Now in Boston.

Dr. Charles Dean Gray, who is one of the physicians responsible for the introduction of the new tonic Tona Vita in the United States, is now in Boston.

Dr. Gray has charge of the work of placing the medicine on sale in New England, and believes Tona Vita will be as successful in America as it was in Europe. He has the following to say about the new preparation:

"The manner of living in the larger cities of the United States is such that perfect health is almost impossible. The human machine will not run true and strong, day after day, with its vitality being continually sapped by the constant nervous strain of modern city life. Irregular hours, hastily eaten food, the wear and tear and rush are largely responsible for the immense numbers of dull, listless, half-sick people of the present generation.

"Debility, or a 'run down condition,' as it is commonly called, is everywhere. Half the people I see in street cars, restaurants, theatres or on the streets are unmistakably in a debilitated condition, with their nerves impoverished and their nerve force greatly diminished.

"Any one who has studied nervous, debilitated people, as I have since commencing my present work, can tell a man or woman in this condition at a glance. I wish to emphatically state that the number of debilitated people in the larger American cities is appalling.

"Tona Vita, the tonic I am helping to introduce, is to combat this condition. I believe it to be the best preparation ever before sold to the American public for nervous debility and other troubles that go hand in hand with this disease."

No one can enjoy life or meet with much success if they are tired all the time, have little ambition, and feel continually depressed in mind and body. All half-sick, worn-out men and women owe it to themselves and their families to try Tona Vita. If the tonic does not make life more worth living and bring back the healthy, energetic spirit that is now lacking, the price paid for the preparation will be refunded.

Tona Vita, the new tonic, is now in the hands of all wholesale druggists, and is on sale at most of the leading drug stores of Boston.

The Art of Candy Making

A certain dessert makes one chef famous. Another chef uses the same ingredients and fails.

So in candy making.

Buying the best ingredients is simply a matter of skill. Blending and cooking them is a Fine Art.

That is why we are so proud of our Chocolates and Bon-bons. They are the results attained by success ful candy chefs—chefs who have the "gift" of catching all the flavor and bringing it out in the most tempting candy you ever tasted.

Will you try a box—say, our new PALL MALL ASSORTMENT. See the display in our window.

SHEPARD HOST OF MANAGERS

The "Boosters" of the Shepard stores in Boston and Providence—in other words, the managerial staff and departmental heads, were given a beefsteak dinner at the Hotel Somerset last night by John Shepard, Jr., president of both stores.

Over eighty were present from Providence, coming up on a special train. John Shepard, Jr., was host and toastmaster, and evoked great enthusiasm when he spoke sincere and enthusiastic words of appreciation for the work done by the heads of the stores during the past year.

Mayor Fitzgerald was given an ovation when he spoke of the future of New England and Boston and the possibilities of the big stores. He paid high tribute to the enterprise of John Shepard, Jr., and the high standing of the Shepard name.

Talks in a happy vein were also made by General Charles H. Taylor of the Globe, J. W. Farley of the Herald, Russell B. Whitman, publisher of the AMERICAN; Fred Atkins of New York, representative of the Shepard stores; Mr. Cole, vice-president of the Shepard Norwell Company; Mr. Strickland, assistant to the president; Mr. Jonas, advertising manager for the Shepard Norwell Company; Mr. Webster, assistant treasurer of the Shepard Norwell Company; Mr. Roose, assistant to the president of the Shepard Company; Mr. Chandler, financial secretary of the Shepard Company, and George Shepard, uncle of John Shepard, Jr.

Lawson a 'Sure-Pop' Senate Candidate

Secretary Prompt to Acknowledge Financier and That Vocabulary Are in the Ring.

Thomas W. Lawson, financier and author, of Boston and Marshfield, is a bona-fide candidate for the United States Senate to occupy the chair to be made vacant when Senator W. Murray Crane steps down and out next March.

This fact was made public today. Mr. Lawson's private secretary, Edward A. McSweeney, was asked this afternoon this question:

"Is Mr. Lawson a sure-enough candidate for the Senate?"

"Yes, sure pop," replied Mr. McSweeney without a moment's hesitation.

The entry of Mr. Lawson and his wonderful vocabulary into the Massachusetts Senatorial ring, where Mayor Fitzgerald has tossed his chapeau, promises a picturesque contest for the place. It is believed Mr. Lawson will not run as a Republican or as a Democrat, but simply as Thomas Lawson.

CHASES STRAW LID, LANDS IN HOSPITAL

William McCormack's new straw hat landed him in a City Hospital out today. Mac was riding on the running board of a trolley on Dudley street, Roxbury. A gust of wind brezed under the lid of the "straw," lifting it from the wearer's head. Mac made a clutch for the hat and fell to the street, injuring his head. He is thirty-seven, is married and lives at No. 56 Barelli street, Roxbury.

FREEMAN TO MAKE FLIGHT AT REVERE

Tomorrow afternoon will mark the opening of this year's aviation season, when Arch Freeman will give a public exhibition off Revere Beach in a Curtiss-Wright biplane. Freeman will use the same machine in which he "attacked" the forts and battleships in Boston harbor with toy bombs this week, this flight being a tryout in preparation for the more extensive demonstration at Revere Saturday.

SEEKS VIOLATORS OF MEAT LAW

The federal authorities started a crusade today against violators of the United States meat inspection laws, and four marketmen appeared before United States Commissioner Hayes. They are Charles Johnson, George Doss, Joseph Filone and Pandele Themo. It is charged they unlawfully used a trade stamp bearing the words "U. S. Inspected and Passed" upon a shipment of meat from Boston to Manchester, N. H., last October. A hearing was set for May 29 and all were held in $500. Other arrests are to follow.

FREE RELIGIOUS MEN COMMEND THE POLICIES OF FOSS

The liberal State policies of Governor Foss were roundly approved by President Charles W. Wendte at the forty-fifth annual meeting of the Free Religious Association of America today in Ford Hall.

"The American people are marvelously tolerant and indulgent towards all differences," said Dr. Wendte. "We have in this Commonwealth of Massachusetts a Governor who believes in the liberal policy and upon every occasion is taking a broad and comprehensive estimate of all things bearing upon the welfare of the people."

Professor L. P. Jacks of Oxford University, though an English Unitarian, pleaded for the continuance of the establishment of the Church of England.

WORKING GIRLS HEAR OF VACATION PLANS

Three hundred working girls of Boston attended the first social of the Vacation Fund Committee in the rooms of the Twentieth Century Club on Joy street. The vacation plans were explained by the members of the committee, who have employed a paid worker to look up boarding houses in the country and on the seashore. Lists of these houses will be furnished to the girls working in Boston so they can choose a place for their vacations. Members of the committee present were Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, Mrs. Roger Wolcott, Mrs. Anne Dollingsworth, Mrs. George Mairs, Miss Elizabeth Porter and Miss Eleanor Allen.

Chicago Tribute to Boston

St. Gaudens' Gift to Chamber

CHICAGO'S LINCOLN STATUE; SCULPTOR ST. GAUDENS

Memorial Presented by Western Delegation Unveiled Today at Chamber of Commerce.

A reproduction in bronze of St. Gauden's celebrated statue of Lincoln in Chicago, the gift of the Chicago Association of Commerce to the Boston Chamber of Commerce, was unveiled at the Boston chamber this afternoon, with formal presentation ceremonies. The reproduction is reduced in size. It is three feet and two inches high, or one-half Lincoln's height. While the unveiling and presentation took place in the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the statue will eventually rest in one of the third floor rooms of Boston Public Library.

In December, 1909, Boston business men were entertained in Chicago. Later the Bostonians presented the Chicago Association of Commerce a bronze tablet.

Last Summer Chicago business men were entertained here. This bronze reproduction of the Lincoln statue is the Chicago men's token of appreciation of Boston hospitality.

The gift is the result of hospitality accorded the Chicago members by the Boston Chamber last year. The party of Chicago business men left that city yesterday, reaching Boston today. At a special gathering of Chicago business men Thursday, the delegation was told just how to express the thanks of the Chicago members for the treatment Boston gave them a year ago.

At Worcester the delegation was met by three members of the Boston Chamber, Chairman Walter M. Lowney of the Trade Extension Committee, and former Presidents Bernard J. Rothwell and George S. Smith of the Chamber.

After arriving in Boston, the Chicagoans will have luncheon at the Exchange Club. After that will come an informal reception at the Chamber of Commerce. The presentation of the statue is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock today.

The statue is to be placed in one of the rooms on the third floor of the Public Library.

A miniature in bronze of the statue to be presented to the Boston Chamber of Commerce by the Chicago Association of Commerce today.

Hires

A thirst—
a fountain—and Hires

There's one sure way to feel just as if you were sitting in a draft from an iceberg. Here it is—try it and see: Step into the nearest store where the fountain sizzles—and just say Hires. Needless to say rootbeer.

It's so cooling. And besides, there's a tonic value to Hires that makes it far better for you than any other summer drink. Natural juices of flowers, roots and herbs, the sap of forest trees. All these give it that tonic bracing property. But not a trace of drugs. Hires only helps—never harms. Drink a glass and see.

FOR RESULTS ADVERTISE IN BOSTON AMERICAN

HARVARD '12 ON HARBOR OUTING

There was a riot of "arterial crimson" over Boston Harbor and Peddock's Island today. The Harvard senior class, 350 of 'em, held its annual maritime outing on that long-suffering lake.

The students started from Harvard square behind a brass band. They went on special trolleys to Otis wharf. Each senior wore a white canvas hat bearing crimson stars and "1912." Many students also wore badges labelled in scarlet "Lady Killer," which caused all the girls who spied them to giggle loudly and stand perfectly still.

T. S. Rose was chief marshal, escort and file-closer for the bunch. He issued one stern order: "Do just as you like." The order was obeyed to the letter.

On the way to Otis wharf the boys sang "Everybody's Doin' It." They swarmed from cars to wharf and aboard a steamer chartered for the day. Roustabouts, banana-hunters, longshoremen and deck-scrubbers along the waterfront surveyed the collegians with a characteristic calm and wondered what educational course produces such songs, customs and general attitude.

UNABLE TO REACH SHIP IN DISTRESS

NORFOLK, Va., May 24.—An unidentified four-masted schooner is in distress southeast of Diamond Shoals, near Hatteras. White rockets were fired at intervals all night, but life-savers could not go to her assistance because of the high seas. The revenue cutter Apache has left Philadelphia to aid the schooner.

Goldbergs, in Prison, Granted a New Trial

Men Accused of Robbing Ullian Jewelry Store Caught After Chase to Europe.

Joseph and Jacob Goldberg, the alleged jewelry robbers, who were arrested in Europe and are now serving long terms in the State prison at Charlestown, are to get a new trial under the decision of the Supreme Court today, which sustained the exceptions filed in the case by their attorney, William R. Scharton.

The two men will be taken from the prison at Charlestown and placed in the Charles street jail to await a new trial. The decision of the Supreme Court in their case is unique, as it has been rare that a new trial has been granted prisoners already sent to the State prison.

Mr. Sharton in bringing his case into the Supreme Court based his exception on the charge of Judge Hatigan to the jury on the question of the answers given by the defendants when a confession was read to them in the Charles street jail reported to have been made by Harris Rothstein and Stanislaus Kusowski. A second exception taken by Scharton was that the court refused to allow himself to cross-examine Chief Dugan as to the flight of the Goldbergs from New York.

The Goldbergs were charged with breaking and entering the jewelry store of Samuel Ullian, No. 1113 Washington street, and stealing jewels worth $15,000. They were arrested by the Boston police after a year's chase through Europe.

TITANIC INQUIRERS REST.

LONDON, May 24.—The government inquiry into the sinking of the Titanic was adjourned today until June 4.

RIOTERS LOOT AND APPLY TORCH IN BUDAPEST RISING

BUDAPEST, May 24.—Street fighting was in progress throughout the city, especially in the factory district, today, although the general strike of the Socialists was declared off last night when the government agreed to concede the manhood suffrage as demanded. The factory owners tried to lock out employes as a punishment, and the men gathered and raided the structures, breaking machinery, looting and in several instances applying the torch to the buildings. Troops were hurried up, but the temper of the rioters was bitter and the soldiers were stoned. They were finally compelled to charge and fire on the crowds. Many persons were wounded.

TRYING TO SETTLE BIG DOCK STRIKE

LONDON, May 24.—In twenty-four hours after a general strike of transport workers had been called the government intervened today with a special court of inquiry to get at the bottom of the dispute. Pressure such as was used in the coal strike may be brought to bear to settle the trouble before the United Kingdom is plunged into business stagnation by a tieup of the ports. The inquiry is being conducted by Sir Edward Clarke, one of England's foremost lawyers. Some hundred and twenty ships are idle at Victoria and Albert docks and at other places. A serious phase of the situation is the low reserve supply of meat.

HAWAII SHAKEN BY VIOLENT EARTHQUAKE

HONOLULU, May 24.—The island of Hawaii has been shaken by the severest earthquake experienced in years. Wireless report Mauna Loa smoking.

Beauties from Far and Near Many Seek Princess Prizes

MISS CUNNINGHAM OF LAWRENCE, IN BEAUTY RACE

Have you nominated your candidate in the AMERICAN'S Princess contest?

If you haven't, it is time you were getting busy. Others have, so now the candidates are numerous, with more and more coming in every hour. This was to be expected after the AMERICAN announced its contest was open to every woman and girl in New England.

There never was a more interesting contest. Pick a Princess? An impossible task, you say. But the AMERICAN has seen a way, and it is by letting the public do the choosing. The public votes, and the majority rules. Then the winning princess is awarded her prize—and a fascinating one it is. It will be a princess outfit, selected by herself and absolutely without cost to her.

Candidates Sunday.

In next Sunday's AMERICAN will be printed a full list of the candidates. At the same time will be printed a page of pictures of the candidates, and mighty pretty candidates they are, as you will all agree. In the same paper will be a five-vote coupon, which entitles the holder to cast five votes for his or her candidates.

Among the popular entries in the contest is Miss Grace Cunningham of No. 760 Broadway, Lawrence. The young woman's friends in Lawrence have rallied to her support and a wide circle of energetic friends is working for her.

The Princess contest is attracting attention all over New England. Friends of the candidates are working zealously and the votes are piling up. This adds to the interest of the competition.

300 Will Be "Dee-lighted."

Three hundred of New England's prettiest girls are going to be "dee-lighted" in a few weeks when the list of prizes is awarded to the winners.

With such a prize list there should be little chance of anyone who enters the contest being disappointed, in addition to the Princess Outfit to be awarded as first prize, there is a long list of vacation trips and other prizes which will be highly acceptable.

Votes tell the story—and only votes. The plan is simple—there's nothing to it except to express your opinion as to who are New England's prettiest girls. And the way to express your opinion is through the ballot or vote coupon, which appears each day in the AMERICAN.

That's absolutely all there is to it.

Glance over the prize list and determine for yourself whether or not it doesn't seem to be fully worth while to enter or have some friend enter. If you don't know of anyone in the contest, think of your best friend now in your opinion is the prettiest girl in New England and send along her picture, or if you have no picture, send in her name and address and we will send her an order on Otis Barony Company, 146 Tremont st., Boston, where she may call and have her photo taken at the expense of the AMERICAN.

Contest Just Begun.

NEXT SUNDAY'S AMERICAN A REAL GOLD MINE FOR YOU!

Outside of the regular news and special features of next Sunday's AMERICAN—the $10,000 Sunday AMERICAN—there is a gold mine in it for the purchaser. The opportunities that the paper offers are unprecedented.

The purchaser of next Sunday's AMERICAN will be afforded a chance to get an oil painting reproduction of your photograph or have it reproduced on a post card. You may get baseball tickets to the Greater Boston League.

You will find in this issue of the paper a five-vote coupon in the fascinating Princess contest, together with a page of the photographs of the contestants and their names. Also there will be printed the $100 cash prize winners in the Remarkable Cigars Thought competition.

There will be a special flag offer for Memorial Day. The flag is eight by five inches in size. Mention should be made also of the famous Brady War Pictures. There is a special offer on these.

In many ways next Sunday's AMERICAN will be the most remarkable newspaper ever printed. Order it today.

MUSICIAN SUES MRS. VANDERBILT

NEWPORT, May 24.—C. Leroy Grinnell, the organist of St. George's Episcopal Church, has brought a suit here against Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, the former wife of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, for $500 damages for the alleged breaking of a contract with the musician to tutor her son.

Grinnell declares that he was engaged to teach William Henry Vanderbilt, Mrs. Vanderbilt's son, and that he was to receive $200 for his services. For some reason which Grinnell says he does not understand Mrs. Vanderbilt never called on him to take up the work.

After a consultation with Lawyer Mortimer A. Sullivan, Grinnell decided to take the matter into court.

DEMAND END OF BUILDING PERIL

Real Estate Men Send Protest Against Everett to the Mayor.

Mayor Fitzgerald blames the Finance Commission for allowing lax conditions in the building department, which have again been called to attention by the collapse of the building at No. 9 Chartier street, North End.

The Mayor, in discussing the need of more stringent regulations, declared that the "inactivity of the Finance Commission" was the cause of more effective measures not being in force.

The Mayor said that he has been waiting for eight months for a report from the Finance Commission on the methods being followed by the building department.

"The Finance Commission is expected to make recommendations which if carried out will remedy conditions. I have been expecting a report from the Finance Commission on this subject for months, but none has been forthcoming," said the Mayor. "I don't feel as if I could do anything radical until I hear what the Finance Commission, which has been studying the situation for so many months, has to say.

"I have already asked the City Council to provide for the increasing of the building inspection force from twenty-four to thirty men."

The Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange has adopted resolutions demanding action at once to put an end to the long list of similar accidents.

To His Honor, John F. Fitzgerald.

Dear Sir—In view of the several serious collapses of buildings in the city of Boston during the past few months, in some cases resulting fatally to workmen, it is the unanimous opinion of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange that your Honor should take immediate steps to improve the present deplorable conditions which exist with regard to the construction of buildings in the city of Boston.

Not only is the present administration of the Building Department of the city of Boston resulting in a loss of money and of life, but these frequent collapses of buildings in course of construction are tending to undermine the confidence of investors to such a degree as to seriously threaten future building operations within the city limits.

It is quite evident that there is something decidedly wrong with the methods and supervision of the Building Department and we call upon you as the Chief Executive of the city to make immediate investigation of the affairs of this department, and to seek by all means in your power to so reorganize the department that this present inefficiency shall become a thing of the past, and we shall no longer be called upon to witness recurrences of the unnecessary and disgraceful accidents which have marred the business operations in our city, particularly during the past year.

In the name of the citizens of the city of Boston we demand of your Honor that you exercise the powers of your office to bring to pass a decided improvement over the present administration of the Building Department.

Very truly yours,

MASSACHUSETTS REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE.

By CHARLES E. LEWIS, Secretary.

WHAT REALTY MEN CALL CITY'S DISGRACE

Here are some of the things which have led to a protest against Commissioner Everett and his Building Department:

On May 10 a building collapsed at Nos. 17-19 Eddyboro street, causing the death of two workmen and injury to four; lack of fire escapes at fires on May 7 at the Dagmar Chambers, Huntington avenue; on March 14 at No. 97 Summer street and on January 15 at the Revere House, where two women were burned to death; faulty construction of building in which four lives were lost at No. 153 Leverett street on January 15; collapse of a building October 10, 1911, with loss of four lives and injury to several men, at Hanover and Battery streets; collapse of building April 14, 1910, at No. 25 Temple street, causing the death of two workmen.

COMFORT FOR THE NERVES

Worn-out, Irritable, Despondent Men and Women Should Try This Treatment.

It is impossible to have thin, impure blood and strong, healthy nerves and muscles. Instead, every part of the body becomes weak. The stomach fails in strength and the appetite becomes poor. The body does not obtain enough nourishment from the food and is actually starved. Soon the nerves begin to complain and the person becomes irritable, despondent, wornout and nervous. For a time there may be no sickness, only a general run-down, weak state, but there is no real defence against disease, and from such a condition spring numerous disorders, as rheumatism, severe nervous diseases, stomach trouble, anæmia and chronic headaches.

Mrs. J. D. Cline, of No. 139 East Federal street, Youngstown, Ohio, says: "I was all run down and on the verge of nervous prostration from overwork and worry. I was so nervous that the least noise irritated me and I wanted to be alone and see no one. My appetite was very poor. My stomach bloated and distressed me after eating. I had to vomit frequently. There were sharp, quick pains in my back as though needles were being pricked into me. On going up stairs or hurrying I became short of breath. My feet would become swollen if I was on them for any length of time and the swelling was very noticeable in the morning. I often had fainting, suffocating spells, when life seemed to leave me. I tried many medicines without benefit and then decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People upon a friend's advice. I was sick in bed when I began taking the pills. After using them for a week I commenced to get better. I continued their use for some time. My nervous trouble disappeared and I was completely restored to health. I am sure that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People will cure other nervous sufferers as they have cured me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are guaranteed by the manufacturers to contain no opiate, narcotic or anything that could injure the most delicate system.

Send today for a copy of our booklet, "Disease of the Nervous System." It is free upon a postal card request.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

U. S. FOREIGN TRADE IS GREATEST EVER

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The foreign trade of the United States during the fiscal year which will end June 30 will exceed any previous year's business. This was the statement made today by Department of Commerce and Labor officials. The statistics at the end of April show that the imports for the fiscal year will approximate $1,500,000,000, and that the exports will reach about $2,200,000,000—exceeding by $45,000,000 and $150,000,000 respectively the record years of 1910 and 1911.

CLOTHING

740-742-744 BROADWAY

NEW YORK

Wolf's, My Clothier.
Boston, Mass.

Gentlemen:-

Although low, we accept your offer for the lot of suits. Were it not for the weather these suits would have been sold at much higher prices.

Very truly yours,

Tobias Greenthal & Mendelson

You've got the weather to thank for this. The coldest spring known for years has brought on conditions that have proven very unsatisfactory to clothing manufacturers. Stocks have kept piling up, waiting for the re-orders that never came. They've now begun unloading.

With ready cash as the basis for argument, we found Tobias, Greenthal & Mendelson, 740 to 744 Broadway, N.Y., willing to listen to our propositions, and before we closed the deal they lost more money than they had any idea they would at the start. This saving in price goes to you in the reduced prices at which we offer the suits.

Happening at this particular moment, this sale should provide a splendid opportunity to fit yourself out for Memorial Day, for much less money than you expected to spend.

For Instance:

$10 Suits

Sell at This Sale

7.85

Made with all the careful attention to detail that Tobias, Greenthal & Mendelson put into all their clothing—and considered a great bargain when retailed at $10.00. Some are in brown worsteds, some medium and dark shadings of fancy cassimeres, besides a lot of fast blue serge suits.

Then Again:

$15 Suits

Are Now on Sale at 9.85

Tobias, Greenthal & Mendelson made these suits with the idea of having them retail at $15.00—and their suits at this price are winners. Mighty handsome patterns, light and medium grays, tans and dark mixtures; cut in three-button sack coat styles, with five button vests.

Still Better:

$18 Suits

You Can Buy For

11.85

Tobias, Greenthal & Mendelson's wholesale prices on these suits were not much in advance of the retail prices we now offer them at. Brand new patterned effects and shadings that are big popular favorites this season—including grays, tans, new striped effects and various mixtures.

Sterling Ale

A Square Deal in Ale

That's what the Official Faucet for Sterling Ale stands for.

And this is the way it works out—

First the Consumer

He supplies the nickel. He ought to get what he asks for. If he has the good sense to ask for Sterling, the Official Faucet gives him means of insisting on the real brew.

Then the Retailer

If he pays the extra price for quality, his trade should know it. He should not have to meet unfair competition from his neighbor, who draws less costly brews. The Official Faucet on the bar tells the story.

Last the Brewer

No other ale is so often asked for by name as Sterling. This demand belongs to us, who have created it by long brewing of fine malt beverages. The Official Faucet protects the good name of our brew.

POINT TO THE FAUCET

BRAVES MOURN AS "CY" YOUNG QUITS THE GAME

Denton True Young, "Old Cy," the according to dispatches today from Pittsburg, which say he has bidden farewell to his teammates in the Boston National League Club and gone home to his farm at Peoli, O. He is said to realize that his pitching arm has gone back on him and that he will never regain his former speed and effectiveness.

The passing of "Old Cy" will come as a great shock to his many friends, although it had been rumored since the opening of the season that the "big fellow's" arm had gone back on him.

It did not become known until today, however, that Young had himself given up all hope of ever pitching again, and had requested the managers of the Boston Nationals to release him. It was much against their wishes that he departed to his home down on the farm at Peoli, O.

It was a sad parting and tears dimmed the eyes of the veteran as he wished a goodby to his baseball friends.

Young has not appeared on the slab this season, the last work having been against the Buffalo team during the Pilgrim's southern training trip when he pitched four innings.

All the old speed and effectiveness seemed to be there and another record season was mapped out for the veteran, but a few days later, while warming up for a game against the Richmond club, he caught cold in his arm and has been forced to lay off since then.

CY YOUNG'S GREAT RECORD ON DIAMOND NEVER APPROACHED

By SAM CRANE.

Denton True Young, for length of of service as a major league pitcher has a record that has never been approached, and it is doubtful if any other pitcher ever comes within several points of "Old Cy's" grand showing in length of time and number of games pitched.

Of late years Young has been called "Old Cy," to distinguish him from "Young Cy" Young, a left-handed pitcher, who flashed for a short period, but never came anywhere near to approaching the veteran in reputation or ability.

It was not alone the length of his record that stamped him as a physical marvel, but his character as a player and a man made him one of the most unique personalities that the game has brought out.

During "Cy" Young made himself beloved by his simplicity, his honesty and devotion to the profession he adopted, and after twenty-two years of consecutive service he is still as popular as ever.

There are many of Young's best and most intimate friends who would have preferred to see him retire from the game when he was at the pinnacle of his fame and popularity.

But, like all old baseball players, Cy refused to believe that he was "going back," and, after being released by the Cleveland Club, August 17, 1911, he accepted an engagement with the Boston Nationals.

And, while he pitched several good games, still some of his exhibitions were such as to demonstrate that the grand old man would have done better to retire on the honors he had already gained.

It was not that the veteran needed the money that he could earn in the years of his declining ability, for he is a wealthy man, so it must be pure love of the sport that induced him to "play out the string" as he has.

Denton Tecumseh Young was born at Gilmore, Ohio, March 29, 1867.

The secret of Young's long and uninterrupted career of twenty-two years is that he has conserved his pitching arm and has also taken the best of care of himself.

Entering into the game when the rules for players' habits and conduct were much more lenient than now, still the green, young farmer boy did not take advantage of the privileges given him, but kept up the early-to-bed-and-early-to-rise rule that he had been brought up to follow on "the farm."

Even in the days of his greatest success, and when he was subjected to all the detrimental influences that a popular baseball favorite invariably is, Cy absolutely refused to be tempted or led astray by possibly well-meaning, but altogether too enthusiastic, friends.

His habits throughout his long baseball career have been absolutely above reproach, and he stands out as one of the very few popular ball players who have been true to themselves and the principles they adopted when they took up the game as a profession.

Cy's First Big Game.

Young first came into prominence in baseball when he was with the Canton (Ohio) club in 1890, when the latter club was playing against McKeesport, Pa.

It was in that game that Cy recorded his first no-hit game. He also struck out eighteen.

This great showing, although made against a minor league team, attracted no end of attention and the job he was in immediately demand.

There were three National League clubs hot-foot after him in a jiffy.

Frank de Haas Robison, the owner of the Cleveland club, was the fortunate one to secure the "phenom," Cy preferring to play in his own state and near his native town of Gilmore.

In Cleveland Cy was thrown with Pat Tebeau, who was at that time manager and captain of the "Spiders," as the Clevelands were called then, and the fiery Pat proved to be just the right man to set the young pitcher on his winning way.

Young, in his very first game in the "big league" was pitted against Anson's Chicago White Stockings, and the youngster won out 8 to 1.

The games between the Orioles and Cleveland during 1894-5-6-7-8 were of the most interesting contests played in those years, the "Spiders" being as a general thing the Orioles' closest opponent. They would not help being bad battles with John J. McGraw and Pat Tebeau fighting against each other.

When Cleveland retired from the National League the entire team was taken to St. Louis to form what is now known as the "Cardinals."

Young did well there, too, but the climate did not agree with him and he was not quite up to his old Cleveland form, although he won the majority of his games.

Won Pennant for Bostons.

It was held in St. Louis that Cy had seen his best days, but it was a false impression. He asked to be transferred from St. Louis, and this request was granted.

So after being with the St. Louis Nationals during 1899-1900 he went to the Boston Americans, where he was a headliner for eight years, helping to win two American League pennants—1903-4—and one world's championship, in 1903.

It was in the latter series that Young showed grand work, the Bostons coming from behind and beating out Pittsburg in a most sensational series.

The history of Young and Criger as the most famous in the country in those days.

When John I. Taylor decided to rebuild his Boston Americans in the Winter of 1908-09, Young was released to Cleveland, and he remained there for two years, and more than held his own.

He was released from Cleveland on August 17, 1911, and then signed an engagement with the Boston Nationals.

Young has three no-hit games to his credit as a major league pitcher. The first was on September 18, 1897, when he shut out Cincinnati.

On May 5, 1904, he shut out the Athletics, of Philadelphia, and a four pitch, ending first base.

On June 3, 1908, Young shut out the New York Americans without a base hit, only one player getting as far as second base.

Young also pitched a twenty-inning game against Rube Waddell, of the Athletics, on July 4, 1905, the latter winning out 4 to 2.

In 1904 he beat Edward Killian, of Detroit, 1 to 0, in fifteen innings.

Young won his five hundredth victory on July 18, 1910, pitching for Cleveland against Washington.

Did Cy Young's grand and unapproachable total record is as follows:

PIMPLES SO DISFIGURING HE SHUNNED FRIENDS

Face Completely Covered. Blackheads, Too. Lasted Four Years. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and Face Is Now Smooth.

R. F. D. 2, Portsmouth, N. H. — "I was bothered with pimples and blackheads in the worst way for over four years. My face and arms were completely covered with them. The pimples would come out on my face and fester all up. They would scab over, and make my face sore, besides being so disfiguring that I shunned my friends. I tried facial cream balms and blemishes with no effect.

"One night I asked a friend what was good for pimples, and he advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment which I did. I would wash my face first with hot water and Cuticura Soap, and then put on Cuticura Ointment, let it stay on five minutes, and then wash my face again with the Cuticura Soap. It would draw the blackheads out at once, and the pimples, oh say, it was one grand relief to go among my friends and be like people. After using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, my face is as smooth as if there never had been a pimple on it. I cannot speak too highly of the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and I hope others will profit by them as much as I have. I know they will after giving them just one trial." (Signed) Arthur E. Caswell, May 6, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book on skin and scalp treatment. Address, "Cuticura," Dept. T, Boston. Tender-faced men should shave with Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick.

TAKES POISON TO END TRAGEDY

Carl Waldemere Nielsen who was believed to have dropped dead from heart trouble in Dorchester on Wednesday evening, killed himself with cyanide of potassium, it was learned today.

Back of the suicide of Nielsen is a tragedy of the most pathetic character that has come to the attention of the Dorchester police in many years. The death of Nielsen left in the care of Mrs Catrina Hansen, his sister-in-law, who reached Boston from Denmark last Sunday, nine children, ranging in ages from three to fifteen years. The woman can not speak a word of English and she is penniless.

Brooded Over Death.

Nielsen was forty-seven years old and lived at No. 47 Leach street. He was employed as a fireman by the American Warp Drawing Machine Company in Dorchester. He quit work last Tuesday. He brooded over the illness of his wife. Although not quite good health, the stricken family and not having any reason to think of death, Nielsen's outlook was gloomy.

Nielsen wrote to his sister-in-law, Mrs Hansen, herself a widow, to come to Dorchester and take care of his house. She reached there on the Carmic on Sunday, bringing three children, Axel fourteen, Oscar twelve, and Myers, ten years old.

The Nielsen family of children consist of Albert sixteen, Fred fourteen, Walter eleven, Agnes eight, Louis seven, and Frances three years old. The addition to the family made it all along months to feed. It is believed that the impossibility of the task occupied Nielsen so that his mind gave way.

Swallows Poison.

On Wednesday evening while at work he walked over to the water faucet and took a drink. Then he tumbled to the floor, dying almost instantly. An autopsy disclosed that cyanide of potassium had been used.

Dorchester neighbors of the stricken family tried today to get English speaking members to take an interest in the family. All of the children except Albert were at the little home today weeping over the death of Nielsen.

The police who looked into the matter, said that the case was one that needed immediate and generous help.

Young Astor Must Wait, Says Actress

Ina Claire Not Tempted by $80,000,000

Explains She Would Be Content with $30 a Week Man if He Really Loved Her.

CHICAGO, May 24—If William Vincent Astor, son of the late John Jacob Astor, marries Miss Ina Claire, "the Quaker Girl," it will be many years hence. That little actress sat in the Elizabethan Room of the Congress Hotel and explained why she is not to be an $80,000,000 bride.

Before the death of his father Vincent Astor was the almost constant companion of Miss Claire during the past Winter, and the thing that puzzled New York society was that the head of the house of Astor made no decided objection to his son's being up to his ears in love with an actress.

The story of their affair was termed by a New York dispatch to the effect that the young millionaire would follow Miss Claire to Chicago.

Only Friends, She Says.

"If Mr. Astor is coming to Chicago I do not know it," she answered. "He has too much on his mind, and I believe him too big a man even if he is young to lose his head. We are friends and good friends, and that is all so far as I know," she added.

Half of the time Miss Claire referred to young Astor by measured words as "old man." Mr. Astor." Then again she would grow reminiscent and refer to him as "Vince," a fine young fellow and a friend.

"I would be displeased with him, even if he came here to see me," she declared. "What! Wed . . . at once! . . . I'm not going chumming with him . . . I believe he has too much responsibility and too much of a load on his young shoul-

[illegible] friend if the [illegible] Miss Claire, however, hastily denied that any such bond found his way to her lover.

Wealth No Magnet.

The seeming paradox of a young woman—and an actress refusing or avoiding a match with the wealthiest eligible man in the whole round world did not seem strange to Miss Claire.

"But surely you will admit you may think that $80,000,000 looks as big to the average girl, but it does not," answered Miss Claire. "It doesn't look much big . . . $30 a week if you happened to love [illegible]

Chelsea Giant Working Hard for Kennery Bout

SANDY FERGUSON REALLY TRAINING

By JACK CONWAY.

SANDY FERGUSON is really training at last, and when he steps into the Arena to-night to mix it up with Tom Kennery the real Dutchman of boxing fans will see a fighter and a fighter combination that he has been waiting patiently for.

The Chelsea giant is going to hard training for a fight he was ever known to in the morning he hits the road and when Kennery for the night.

In the afternoon on the gymnasium floor and a let up His gymnasium skipping bag punching and a six round session.

And so on, day after day, until Sandy is straight for the fight with Kennery it will be a real stepping stone toward his goal.

Kennery, however, is a type of ring man that is not to be overlooked. It is generally conceded that he will take Ferguson's measure. The New York boy is a big, clever chap of the [illegible] type and has a punch to [illegible] Ferguson to become the [illegible] champion.

RECORDS MAY GO AT SCHOOL MEET

The height of the schoolboy outdoor track season will be reached tomorrow with the big annual Harvard Interscholastics at the Harvard Stadium. Close to 150 athletes from about twenty five schools will be out in their speed togs and the greatest set of events in the history of the meet are anticipated.

The events will be the 100 and 220 yard dashes, 120 yard high hurdles, 220 yard low hurdles, 440 yard run, broad jump and mile relay, running high jump, running broad jump, shot put, pole vault and the hammer throw. The enter list this year is one of the largest in the history of the meet and the boys have been performing in high clang so it is predicted that several records are in danger.

The games will start at 2.30 with the 120 yard hurdles and the shot put will get under way close to this time. The hurdles but seven men are entered but the field is a clever one and some keen competition is expected.

Boston's Hope in Salisaway.

George Salisaway of the High School of Commerce will be the hope of the Boston followers of the game in the event. He stands a fair chance for laurels, but he will have to display his best form in order to win. Phil Means of the Lexington High, is also in this event and is bound to give his opponents a run for honors. Goody of Exeter and Wescott of Dorchester who placed last year.

Fifteen boys are entered in the 100 yard dash and this should be a great event. The fast time last season was 10[illegible] seconds but if the competition is close and four winner proceed to the finish, it is expected that the event will go at even figures. The critics pick Charlie Rice of Powder Point as the winner and judging from past performances he should win. He will have to perform at his best speed. Teschner of Exeter is a dangerous second and Sharpe of Worcester Academy of Powder Point, Schultz of Boston Latin and one or two out of town schools have entered are classy performers at this distance.

Fast Time Looked for.

Many of the runners in the 100-yard event will also be starters in the 220 yard dash and the outside of the track will be the scene of fierce Rose of Powder Point is a favorite in this event.

In the 440 yard run Irving Howe of Boston Latin High is a classy performer and a likely winner but will be forced to Caples of Peak Pt. and several others.

The 880 and the 220 yard hurdles will be closely contested both events will bring out some high class performers.

The relay events will be the classy feature especially the running high up. The final between Powder Point, Exeter, Worcester Academy and Wesley Methodist of Providence, should be a thriller for a big delivery of scholastic athletes. Both are the best scholastic high jumpers entered in the meet, Bowen of Tilton and each will be a candidate for the Olympic team.

RILEY'S COLUMN

THE Red Sox won yesterday's baseball game from the "Nats" in a way to make the scoring rules look lame again. It was a clever play but was a tough one for the scorers, who generally ignored the rules altogether and set it down as their judgment or fancy dictated.

* * *

THE score was 5 even in when the Red Sox came to bat in the last half of the tenth inning. Speaker slammed one so hard at Olson that he dropped it and the effort had to go for a hit. A "hit-and-run" play was then signalled, but part of the play was for Lewis to bunt instead of hitting hard, on the ground.

* * *

WITH Speaker running at top speed for second base Ball and Peckinpaugh were drawn to that bag when Lewis bunted. Lewis' tap drew Olson from third, George, the pitcher, and Adams, the catcher. George recovered the ball and threw out Lewis at first.

* * *

BUT Speaker had such a good lead that he reached second as quickly as the throw reached first and, seeing Peckinpaugh and Ball covering second and Olson drawn in on the bunt, he hiked for third. Hohnhorst saw "Spoke" moving and, in his hurry and excitement, heaved the ball at third. Nobody was there to receive the throw and Speaker went on home with the winning run.

* * *

THE play was clever and one that seldom occurs. With none out and a man on first—one run needed to win— it was a stroke of baseball genius. But the rules make it difficult to score the play.

* * *

THE scoring rules say:

In case a base-runner advances a base through the failure of a baseman to stop or try to stop a ball accurately thrown to be base the latter shall be charged with an error and not the player who made such throw, provided there was no option for it. If such a throw be made to second base the scorer shall determine whether the ball is such a shortstop shall be charged with an error.

* * *

UNDER a strict interpretation of the rule, Olson is charged with an error. But Olson was drawn in by Lewis' bunt, the best of the scorers gave Hohnhorst no penalty for having thrown at an empty bag. There certainly was no error in the throw for Speaker was going for it and he didn't see why he was not entitled to such a play with reasonable speed to base ball playing.

* * *

IT was ordinarily Peckinpaugh's duty to have covered third when Olson was drawn in, but he hurried to second when Speaker dashed for that base and when Lewis' bunt was of the kind that carried Ball in and Speaker started for second before it was made. Olson will not be expected to guard his base then, and it is unfair to expect Speaker would do so.

* * *

IN other words, the play was executed just to mix up the Cleveland defense and succeeded that way, but it turned up

Maguire [illegible] error because Speaker made no effort [illegible] his disgust in throwing at the empty bag.

Nobody left much on at the fifth inning when the Red Sox scored their [illegible] Speaker stopped at second base which should have been [illegible] when [illegible] a square drive [illegible] that [illegible] dropped [illegible] [illegible] second. Whitemarsh [illegible] at the middle [illegible] Hooper then [illegible] Scott along the third base [illegible] sacks and Wagner scored on [illegible] drive.

* * *

THEN came Speaker's [illegible] Speaker want to [illegible] Peckinpaugh just as Ruth tried to [illegible] Ball [illegible] Speaker started for [illegible] the throw for Speaker was [illegible] but [illegible] he was not entitled [illegible] such a play with reasonable [illegible] base ball playing.

* * *

IN the sixth, Jackson was on third and [illegible] at first with one out when Adams offered [illegible] third strike. [illegible] Speaker started for second before it was made. Olson will not be expected to guard his base then, and it is unfair to expect Speaker would do so.

* * *

"DUFFY" LEWIS had the [illegible] a great [illegible] in the second. With [illegible] and two strikes he [illegible] offered at nine and Western [illegible] called it a ball. Easterly protested and, Westerly [illegible] Lewis [illegible] to Louisville. Lewis was called out. "Silk" protested Westerly's decision. The next time Duffy went to the plate he struck out again, but one of the strikes was a foul tip which disagreed Easterly right hand and he had to leave the park.

* * *

CICOTTE pitched remarkable baseball until the sixth inning, only three scratch hits being made off him. Then the Nats found him freely and he should have been withdrawn in the ninth after Ryan had singled and Bell had doubled [illegible] waiting for Peckinpaugh to bunt both home and reach third himself on Lewis' drive to right field. The same error was made with Larry Pepe in the first White Sox game. Larry should have been on [illegible] inning after his hand was [illegible] with a hot drive, and the game would probably have been won. All of which would seem much now in the stand[illegible]

Fasting Bicycle Rider Made a Mile in 54 Seconds at Carnegie Institute

Prof. Levanzin Continues His Story of Methods of Scientific Starving

Professional Cyclist Describes in Detail How Food Effects Were Sought

[illegible] Agostino Nattli [illegible] I [illegible] a well known [illegible] professional cyclist [illegible] Boylston [illegible] Medford [illegible] Boston [illegible] professor [illegible] during the last [illegible] ran [illegible] one mile in fifty four seconds he said.

He described the ergometer as having [illegible] to the floor. The rear wheel [illegible] by a motor [illegible] mounted [illegible] a magnet which creates a small amount of electricity, giving a resistance similar to that experienced by a man pedaling on a slight incline.

Mode said he fasted three days before taking the test, the purpose being to ascertain whether food containing fats was more or less valuable than that without fats.

"I went to work at the nutrition laboratory on December 8 last," he said, "and was to receive sixty cents an hour for my time during the experiments. I was to keep there until about the middle of April.

"I would go to work fasting. I would lie down on a cot and rest for a while. The doctors would test my heart before I started on the ergometer. A clip would be used to close my nostrils. Then the mouthpiece attachment was [illegible] over my mouth. Through [illegible] I would breathe oxygen and [illegible] would [illegible]

"I would pedal from fourteen minutes to four hours at a time. At other times I would ride without the adjustment at [illegible] and to make a comparison to meet the [illegible] in different degrees.

"I gave blood [illegible] and urine [illegible] each day. I was weighed [illegible] and I had no [illegible] to do [illegible] I [illegible] fifty [illegible] miles in four hours. [illegible] pressure, or resistance, on the ergometer was similar to riding up a [illegible] in the [illegible]

"After [illegible] on different things during the [illegible] meals. After the experiments were over each day, they would give or tell me what they wanted me to eat.

"Doctors came from universities to see the test [illegible] one from Scotland. [illegible] people for tests made, about the [illegible] in the middle of April, however, I began to get 'stale' from overtraining and was not so good."

parts of the body begin to be destroyed.

Fats are different from other [illegible] foods in that [illegible] professional fasters provide themselves with a good [illegible] age of adipose tissue that has to be consumed before the essential parts of the normal body are released. This happens ordinarily after many days, and sometimes weeks. It may happen that a fast of forty or fifty days has been carried on without one atom of the essential parts of the body being destroyed.

This, it will [illegible] to be of the utmost importance, and has been, unfortunately, overlooked by all the physiologists who have studied animals and men during fasting.

Meets with Hardships.

When I wrote to Professor Benedict that I intended to give him an "ignition fast" from my normal weight he answered that he could not understand what difference there might be in physiological research between a fast started from 145 or from 240 pounds. I explained to him that to start from 240 pounds means to have the responsibility of the destruction of adipose tissue only, which is designed by the tissue while in a starving from the normal weight you destroy the functions of all the essential and normal tissues of the body and of not more than ten per cent. of fat, and so you have the physiological results of the overhauling of the whole human machine.

This evidently shows that although Professor Benedict [illegible] my word in addition on the cover of his [illegible] books published by the Carnegie Institution, he did not know its [illegible] meaning.

Next you are permitted to wash your hands and face without using any soap.

On the first day they offered me in which to wash my face the same dirty basin in which everyone in the laboratory washes his hands after working machinery or touching chemicals.

I had to clean it of the dirt it contained and washed there with the great disgust, but unwilling still to confirm of my treatment.

It seemed strange that the absolutely rich Carnegie Institute, which squandered so lavishly its thousands of dollars to torture dogs, and for the long travels of the principals and assistants, had not a few cents to buy a clean basin for a professional man, as I am, to wash my face.

Grumbled a Bit.

I grumbled a bit and Professor Benedict finally provided me with a new enamel basin, but tub, during the last days, disappeared. When I asked one of the Assistants where it was, he told me that the evening before they collected waste material in it.

I answered that I preferred to wash under the tap water, and so I did during the few of my stay, because no other basin had been offered for my use.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

PROFESSOR LEVANZIN SHOWS HOW FASTING KILLS FLESH

Professor Agostino Levanzin, in the third installment of the story he is writing for the AMERICAN describing his remarkable fast accomplished at the Nutrition Institute conducted by Carnegie funds, today takes up the story from the time he entered the cabin in which the tests were made.

He points out the hardships endured, the hunger to be sure, but anything gone wrong while he was in the glass "room" and discusses the intricate tests in detail.

By AGOSTINO LEVANZIN.

I had been occupying this box for three weeks before I arose [illegible] and [illegible] visit [illegible] Dr. Benedict had explained to me that there was a [illegible] of oxygen and [illegible] could be broken with [illegible] and the other things I have [illegible] where I would have been exposed if these perhaps [illegible] would be of no interest to my [illegible] state. The general [illegible]

It was a [illegible] relief to me after the first night, which was quite [illegible] because I [illegible] extraordinary [illegible] to [illegible] signs of two [illegible] which mean [illegible] remain still until [illegible] connect the apparatus. Then [illegible] scraping of the knife removing the [illegible] and then the cover was taken [illegible] my living tomb.

Tests of Respiration.

I [illegible] o'clock of the fourteenth day of April was the official start of the fast, although I had eaten my last meal at [illegible] o'clock of the preceding day. Professor Benedict did not wish to encumber those fourteen hours, just to be sure that during that period the [illegible] supper of an ice cream, bananas and cream and an apple tart should be digested.

The mattress was taken from the [illegible] and placed on two wooden horses and I was placed upon it. Then the respirometer was tried on me for the first time.

This is a wonderful machine in charge of a wonderful man, Thorne Carpenter, who is considered the whole world over the greatest authority for respiratory studies and apparatus. He was sent by Professor Benedict for several years' study in Europe and he worked in Paris with the French physiologist Chauveau, and with Zuntz of Berlin to study the respirometers that were considered the best.

Then after travelling through the most important laboratories of England, Germany and Italy, he returned to the Rockery laboratory equipped with invaluable information and experience.

Then Professor Benedict made him set up the two most important types, the Chauveau Tissot and the Zuntz-Geppert in the same room, and by connecting them to both respirometers for long periods he learned the best parts of both instruments, and in this way was able to produce an instrument which is the most perfect in the world.

Nozzles in Nostrils.

This has been done since November last, and I was the first man to be [illegible] thoroughly with the apparatus. [illegible] and experiments have been made [illegible] about an hour [illegible] Then [illegible] apparatus was [illegible] and [illegible] Effects in respirations [illegible] and [illegible] nozzles [illegible] nostrils [illegible] connected [illegible] Last [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] secure. The nozzles are, in truth, a great [illegible]

Firstly they [illegible] to seal your mouth [illegible] you found that the sealing of the [illegible] and the nozzles [illegible] uncomfortable for the [illegible] of the experience and [illegible] destroys the normal respiration and gives pain.

Now you are [illegible] warned to keep your mouth shut [illegible] and the assistant who [illegible] now watching the [illegible] [illegible] keep his eyes steadily on [illegible] so that the experiment may be [illegible] and respected.

After the [illegible] tests the method specified [illegible] were removed and I was [illegible] in a balance that indicates [illegible] fraction of a gram.

Began at 132 Pounds.

To the honor of the institution every measurement of any kind is always backed by several assistants. Mr. Carpenter long the weight every morning, the record [illegible] and one of the assistants [illegible] the weighing. He compared his record with that of Mr. Carpenter and if they agreed [illegible] it with his initials. Then the weight was written on a blackboard to indicate the curve of the body loss during the whole fast.

I have started my fast at the weight of 132 pounds. This is very important in the [illegible] according to the Yale University measurements for students in the normal weight of my body relative to its height of a foot [illegible] inches.

I tried and succeeded in keeping it at a reduced weight till I started my fast and [illegible] [illegible] in "Ignition Fast" that is a fast in which from the first moment, essential

A Story of Japanese Plotters—Love, Mystery and Tragedy—Based on the Great Play Now Running in New York

THE JAPANESE GOAD THE DYING TOKORAMO TO GREATER EFFORTS.

Omayi was to return to Japan with Tokorama's manuscript. His passage was booked for the first of the month. He and Joshakawa stayed with Tokorama, and long after midnight the others came in.

By J. W. McCONAUGHY

"H—M—M! I am not sure but what yours is a very good p-an, my dear fraulein, and I am certain that Dr Omayi would approve of it. I think that Dr. Omayi and I can convince Tokorama of the necessity for the change. But it would be asking too much of you?"

"You did not ask," replied the girl quickly, and she sprang to her feet, her face glowing with eagerness. "I will start for his house right away, if you agree."

"No, no, no!" protested the old man hastily. "This must be handled very diplomatically. With all respect to your charms, my dear fraulein (the old intriguer smiled and bowed) I think that Dr. Omayi and I had better convince Tokorama that he must leave the city."

"Can you do that today?" she asked eagerly

"I have no doubt of it."

Then I can take him tomorrow to the same place that I went."

Joshakawa shook his head doubtfully. "I think a surrounding where you had no friends or acquaintances would be better for him, don't you think?" suggested Joshakawa.

"Not there true," agreed the girl promptly. "There are a lot of people there who would be running in and bothering me with questions."

She named another village that she had heard of as a quiet and comfortable place, but admitted that she had never been there.

"Monotario can go with you and look it over," replied Joshakawa "And, of course we will insist that you go to no expense."

Teri answered that she would spend the last penny she had to help Tokoramo, but with good sense recognized the justice of the plan. It was arranged that she and Monotario should leave late that afternoon and meet in Yoshikawa as soon as they could get tickets the next day. Thus the Japanese settled.

Before leaving Joshakawa took particular pains to impress on Teri the importance of not communicating with Tokorama until after all the arrangements for the meeting had been completed.

When they reached the street Kobohashi turned a questioning look on Joshakawa, but the old man shook his head, and they walked back to the Walden Pension as they had come in a silence. Deep in the brains of all three were working feverishly, all of the three. Monotario felt the least concern. He had nothing to do but obey—obey blindly and unquestioningly—the orders of his elders.

The silence was unbroken until after the youngest men had settled themselves comfortably with cigarettes in Kobohashi's rooms at the Pension. Joshakawa did not sit. He paced the floor, staring hard at the carpet, and occasionally giving restless glances at one or the other of his companions.

At last he murmured aloud

"there is no other way." And then he stopped in front of Monotario.

"My son," he said gravely; "you are willing to die for your country?"

"Of course, my father," replied the young man, rising and tossing away his cigarette. "You would face worse than death?"

"I would do anything—for my country," replied the young man, as simply as before.

Joshakawa took out his purse and gave him a handful of bank notes.

"Here is the money you will need," he said. "You will go with this woman in the morning. This evening you heard everything today and you remember what we told you, the hearing—of the danger of this woman's presence in the city."

Monotario nodded. Joshakawa lowered his voice and gazed steadily into the young man's eyes.

"She must not come back!" he said.

There was not a quiver of the round brown face—not a twitch of the dark eyes that looked back into Joshakawa's and found what was not spoken. Monotario took a long puff of his cigarette and nodded to indicate that he understood thoroughly what was expected of him.

"And then?" he suggested

"Then you will hurry across the Danish frontier as quickly as possible," continued Joshakawa. "You had better use a forged passport. Get to England with all expedition and return to Japan by way of the United States. These precautions may be taken as a final safeguard. You, I trust, my son, you will not see your work that you will have to fly from the police like a common criminal."

"It will be careful, my father," said the young man, soberly

"That is right."

By a common impulse the three men and Joshakawa and Kobohashi shook hands with the young man.

"For Nippon!", exclaimed the other solemnly.

"For Nippon!" echoed the others

Monotario and Teri departed that evening. No trace of her was ever found again

The Last Offering

THE habit of discipline is greater than any power of the will. It forces action when will and reason rebel. It is that which forces a wounded and wearied soldier to stay in the ranks and march when, as a matter of sheer choice, he would infinitely rather lie down and die.

And it was this habit—to which he had been moulded in the iron school of his boyhood—that kept Tokorama at his desk in the last week or two of the time allotted him to finish his task. He was no longer a real man. He was a machine, with his mind, were things detached from his being. Even Ilona and her life were mere shadows unreal.

He had in place of a heart, a lump of lead that throbbed dully, heavily. He had ceased to think about her. If a question arose in his mind it was answered by the cold reflection that it would be all right "after it was over." And he worked on and on, like a man in a trance.

Only once did he break down. That was when Ilona, with a sudden impulse, came to his room and threw herself on her knees beside his chair, and begged him to tell her what was the matter with him. He had not the heart to repulse her, but he could not tell her. He could only stroke her hair and murmur that it was nothing—nothing that would last long.

"Is it—is it another woman?" she asked, with a sudden fierce jealousy.

He had laughed bitterly at that. "No, dear, there is no other woman. There never will be. I am married to my work, and it is a jealous mistress."

"Then you will not be long," she had said, with a sigh of relief. "I will wait for you, dear, and I will be very patient."

And she had been very patient. She had left him to himself, and only once or twice a day had she come to his room to see if he needed anything. Then she would steal in, and sit for a few minutes looking at him with a world of love in her eyes, and then steal out again.

Tokorama had not seen her for two days when the last page of his manuscript was finished. He had worked on that page for nearly twenty-four hours without a break, and when he had written the last word he had thrown down his pen and sprung to his feet with a cry of relief. Then he had sunk back in his chair, and sat staring at the wall in front of him, his face ashen, his eyes dull and lifeless.

He had finished his task, but he had no sense of triumph. He was conscious only of a great weariness, and a desire for sleep. He was too tired to think, too tired to feel. He sat there for a long time, and then, with a great effort, he rose to his feet, and walked to the door. He opened it, and called Ilona's name. There was no answer. He called again, and then he remembered that she had not been near him for two days. He went to her room, and found it empty. Then he went to the room of Omayi, and found that empty also. He returned to his own room, and sat down to wait for them.

It was late in the afternoon when Omayi and Ilona came in together. They found Tokorama sitting at his desk, with his head resting on his arms, fast asleep. Omayi looked at the manuscript, and then at the sleeping man, and his face lighted up with a smile of satisfaction. He turned to Ilona, and whispered to her to be quiet, and not to disturb Tokorama. Then he sat down to wait for him to awake.

Tokorama awoke with a start, and looked around him in a dazed way. Then he saw Omayi, and sprang to his feet.

"It is finished," he said, with a sigh of relief. "I have done my work, and I am glad it is over."

"You have done well," said Omayi, "and I congratulate you. Your work will live long after you and I are dead and forgotten."

Tokorama looked at him with a strange look in his eyes. "Dead and forgotten," he repeated. "Is that the reward we get for our work?"

"It is the reward we must be content with," said Omayi. "We have no right to look for any other reward."

"I have looked for another reward," said Tokorama, "and I have found it. I have found it in the love of a woman."

"Love!" said Omayi, with a contemptuous shrug of his shoulders. "Love is a thing that we must put behind us. It is a thing that has no place in the life of a man who has work to do. Love is a thing for women and children, and for men who have no work to do. Love is a thing that we must not think about."

"I do not think about it," said Tokorama, "but I cannot help feeling it. I have found love, and I have found happiness, and I am grateful for them."

"Where is Ilona?" asked Omayi, looking around the room.

"She is in the next room," said Tokorama. "She is asleep. She has been asleep for hours. She is tired out with watching and waiting for me to finish my work."

"Then we will not disturb her," said Omayi. "She will be glad to hear that you have finished your work, and that we can start for Japan tomorrow."

"Tomorrow!" said Tokorama, with a start. "Tomorrow! Why, I cannot go tomorrow. I cannot leave Ilona behind me."

"You must," said Omayi, with a frown. "You have no choice in the matter. You must go with me tomorrow, and Ilona must go with you. You cannot leave her behind you. She is a Japanese, and she must go back to Japan with you."

"I will not go back to Japan," said Tokorama, with a look of determination on his face. "I will not go back to Japan, and I will not leave Ilona behind me. She is my wife, and I will not leave her."

"Your wife!" said Omayi, with a look of astonishment. "Your wife! When did you marry her?"

"I married her in Paris," said Tokorama, "and I will not leave her behind me."

"You married her in Paris!" said Omayi, with a look of anger. "You married her without asking my permission! You married her without asking the permission of the Emperor! You married her without asking the permission of the Mikado! You have committed a crime against the Mikado, and you have committed a crime against Japan. You have committed a crime against me, and you have committed a crime against yourself. You have committed a crime against Ilona, and you have committed a crime against your country. You have committed a crime against your honor, and you have committed a crime against your soul. You have committed a crime against your God, and you have committed a crime against your Emperor. The Dance of the Senses

A Terpsichorean Sensation That Is Thrilling Paris

"Avarice." The dancer is supposed to be holding a bag of gold.

(On top) "Fear" (on bottom) "Joy, Exhilaration, and Abandon," as posed by Mlle. La Gai.

By LOUISE LA GAI

PRIMITIVE people dance when they feel a strong emotion of any kind. They dance before going to battle when filled with hate and enmity.

Their victorious return is the signal for more dancing. They dance at love feasts and at funerals.

Today we are going back to this primitive expression of the emotions by means of rhythmic music, and the dance of the emotions is the last Paris sensation.

Emotions of all sorts are depicted as much by facial expression as by movement and gesture, and the modern dancer must have imagination, more imagination, and then still more.

Besides that she must have a flexible, pliable body, which responds instantly to every demand made upon it. No good dancer was ever fat, and most dancers are the other way and are inclined to be very thin.

There are two reasons for this. One is because constant exercise decreases the weight, the other is because weight hinders one in expressing by poses and gestures those thoughts or emotions which one is trying to convey to the minds of the audience. For instance, the dancer becomes rigid with fear or hate. Her face expresses this feeling; so does her body.

If she is very slightly built, the very angles of her body suggest these emotions. If she were stout, there would be [illegible] and, for some reason, the full round face is the perfect in beauty, is not [illegible] of all the expressions as [illegible] girl whose muscles show [illegible] and are not hidden by a padding [illegible] no matter how beautiful.

Like the Cat

The dancer must suggest the cat in grace and quickness, and the cat is a creature of muscle and sinew.

One more thing is necessary for the good dancer—perfect health. A sense of proportion comes in handy, too, for no "an reveals anything, and the portrayal of the emotions especially needs good, sound judgment to guard one in the dance pantomime which I call the dance of the senses.

Every dance is really a pantomime that is, the portrayal, without words, of some story. Ordinary pantomimes can be arranged by any one who has imagination and is willing to work hard, and these dances are so useful for developing the intensity of the performer, as one has to convey an entire story by means of gesture and action alone.

You will get [illegible] pantomimes [illegible] arranged [illegible] pictures should give you endless ideas of what stories to act out.

The dance of the emotions, however, while it is in a way pantomime, is an elaborate dance, the various feelings and sensations being depicted by rhythmic gestures of the body to the accompaniment of music.

The Original Idea

The original idea is that of a pure soul coming to earth. One after another the soul is filled with all the varying emotions known to the human heart.

The soul enters clad in long white veils of innocence and there is a dance to pastoral music with suggestions of spring time happiness and then of love. The second part shows the soul's temptations. A bag of gold lies on the ground. This the dancer picks up and lets the gold pieces run through her fingers, excitement, greed ambition and the lust of power and money showing in her face and overcoming all the gentle emotions of the [illegible] expressing the miserly, covetous, selfish desire for money.

At last she spills the gruppes, and crushing them into the golden cup a bewildered dance of the senses follows, which is [illegible] in the [illegible] a fleshly exposed of carnal appetites. At the end of this [illegible] she [illegible] the ground exhausted, and when she rises to the sound of a death dirge, fear of death, the desire to live and [illegible] overcoming emotions are plainly shown in dance and gesture.

At the end repentance, and finally in a great burst of music the deathless soul triumphant over the senses wings its way to immortality.

Must Have Control

To dance a pantomime of this kind one has to have control over a great technique and be able to make every gesture mean something. That is what most dancers cannot do. They make many gestures, but consider meaningless steps, and the onlookers ask themselves, What does it all mean?

A costume, of course, helps a lot, and the music is also made to convey a very distinct idea, but the main thing is the [illegible] You [illegible] poses of [illegible] pictures should give you endless ideas of what stories to act out.

It Is Not Always May

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Enjoy thy youth. It will not stay
Enjoy the fragrance of the prime,
For, O! it is not always May."
—Longfellow.

"THAT is true; it will not; the old will say with a sigh as they would call back many slighted and unappreciated Mays if it could.

But the young, who believe that May (which is youth) is simply a matter of will, do not sigh. They laugh, because to them it seems that life will be always May. And because they laugh and rejoice the youth [illegible] they fail to appreciate much that [illegible] offers them.

I am going to appreciate, but fail to make use of it, that May [illegible] in them in her outstretched hands. They squander opportunities, are reckless with time, and wasteful of that which is given to them in such abundance and [illegible] that will be measured out with niggardly exactness in the years to come.

For all of which they should not be scored. There is no more pitiable spectacle than a very old head on young shoulders, unless it be a very young head on shoulders that are bowed with age.

Don't Shorten It!

It is a prerogative of youth to be thoughtless, light hearted and light-headed as well. Time will bring thoughtfulness and make the head heavy. That it makes hearts heavy is no [illegible] the rule that one should not wish to shorten another's Maytime by even a day.

The trouble is that the older sometimes forget they were once young, and the younger show no interest in the opinions and prejudices of the [illegible]

From the outlook of the old, youth demands an absorbing interest from them in a story they read many years ago, and which they have since learned is not true.

From the viewpoint of the young, age demands they pay [illegible] to lessons that will not have to be [illegible] next year.

One should never do and [illegible] in the primer worry over the many-syllabled words to be conquered later on. Neither should one demand from the young too serious consideration of the troubles of the future, many of which never happen. The majority don't.

Give to Others

If the young will be glad they are young it is a great deal. If they will incorporate in the rejoicing an ambition to bring a little of the May-time of life to those who have passed it, it will be more.

They are bubbling over with enthusiasm over their own affairs. This stream of enthusiasm is exhaustless so long as youth lasts, and shows no diminution if there is a little enthusiasm given those who have lost it.

All that is needed to Youth is in such glorious abundance that there is an excess of happiness to share with those whose store is decreasing.

One's May-time is lengthened, rather than shortened, by thoughtfulness of others. Indeed, this May-time may be stretched to cover an indefinite and indeterminate number of years by giving others pleasure. It is the only way to remain young that contains no element of selfishness.

And so I hope that the gods are kind, and that those who are young are permitted by the older to enjoy everything that belongs to youth so long as youth shall last.

Young, Be Happy

It makes age easier to bear to have been happy when young. There are few better preparations for the years than the memory of innocent and unrestrained happiness in youth.

There is little that makes a parent wince than the recollection of one's own youth at ways in mind. Its hopes, its enthusiasms, its ambitions, its joves and its fears.

Those who forget they once had a May are always the hardest, and the most uncharitable.

And so, I say to the young
"Enjoy the Spring of Love and Youth,
To some good one you have the best;
For [illegible] will teach thee soon the truth,
There are no birds in the last year's nest."

Farming by Dynamite

How Science Is Benefiting Agriculture

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

DOING work by explosion is one of the most remarkable features of modern scientific advance. Automobiles, aeroplanes and motor boats are driven by a series of rapid explosions in the cylinders of an engine, instead of by the pressure of steam, and without these engines, actuated by explosion many of the most marvelous triumphs of swift locomotion with which we have recently become familiar would be impossible. With their aid man has conquered the air. The science of explosives has reached a point where the application appears to be almost limitless.

By careful manipulation and ingenious machinery an explosive agent [illegible] mite, or nitro-glycerine, in a [illegible] of the many forms, can be made to work with the nicety and certainty of a steel tool, in boring tunnels through rocks and mountains. Study and experience have rendered it possible to direct and confine the force of an explosive almost as if it were a hammer or a chisel of superhuman power in the hand of a workman. Working by the application of slow, gradual pressure is an out of date process—now we work with strokes as quick as lightning, but perfectly controlled. Modern machines operated by explosion are THE GUNS OF SCIENCE. Their force is empowered not to hurl projectiles, but to the useful work.

Among all the applications of the principle of explosion none is more surprising than its recent introduction into agriculture, described by Dr. Henry Smith Williams in HEARST'S MAGAZINE for May. By exploding sticks of dynamite in the ground the sub-soil is broken up and pulverized to a depth of five or six feet. This is three or four times as deep as a sub-soil plow can go, and the pulverization effected is more complete. The result is that new soil is made available to an almost unlimited extent. The work of the farmer with his old fashioned plow compares with that done by dynamite as the scattering of a rake with the delving of the plow itself.

By the new process the locked up treasures of the soil several feet beneath the surface are released, and the consequences are amazing. Corn, cotton, hay, garden vegetables, fruit trees—all respond astonishingly to the stimulus. In some cases cotton crops have been QUADRUPLED by the dynamite treatment of the soil. One cultivator of fruit declares that he has got from four-year-old peach trees, "planted with dynamite," as much fruit as six-year-old trees ordinarily yield, and when a tree begins to decline, he starts it off again by exploding dynamite sticks around it.

Simple Explanation

The explanation, as Dr. Williams points out, is simple. The object of breaking up and pulverizing the soil is to bring its constituents into contact with air and moisture. The plow only scrapes the surface, while deep beneath lie vast quantities of potential soil energy, which cannot be brought into play as long as the ground remains in a hard, compact state. By deepening the available soil the farmer CREATES A NEW FARM, and even many new farms, on the same area of ground.

Soil is made from stone and rock. Nature works slowly in breaking these up. Even when triturated by natural processes the resultant soil is not very deep, and, moreover, it has to be stirred up again and again in order that the plant stimulating powers may be freshened. The plow and other antiquated agricultural implements simply turn the soil over and over again until its potential energy is exhausted. The explosive process by carrying the pulverization several feet downward brings new soil into activity.

Amazing Figures

The gain is almost incredible. A cubic foot of stone, as Dr. Williams points out, weighs a trifle over a hundred pounds. An acre of fertile land, of average depth of soil, exposes to the action of air and water an area of perhaps seventy square miles; and, "by running his plow a few inches deeper, the farmer may add several miles per acre to the available surface of his soil."

Even with the aid of engines to drive his plows the farmer cannot go much deeper with them than he has already gone, but by applying an EXPLOSION he can go several feet deeper. Theoretically, it would seem to be impossible to set a limit to the gain in available soil that this new process places within the farmer's reach. If he can thus make several farms out of one, the productiveness of the earth may in time be made so great that it can maintain 6,000,000,000 inhabitants as easily as it now supports 1,500,000,000. The relation of cost to result remain to be worked out by experiment.

Perhaps one of the most gratifying results of the use of scientific methods in the cultivation of the soil may be the encouragement of that which the world so seriously needs at present, viz., a tendency of those who now flock to the cities to "go back to the land." Men will not long desert the cities for occupations that do not interest them. Old fashioned methods on the farm are not interesting when contrasted with the charm that mechanical employments offer.

But let science once shed her fascinating light upon agriculture, let the farmer feel that his work, too, represents the highest results of knowledge, and there will be no lack of cultivators of the soil to feed the world, and keep the prices of foodstuffs within reasonable limits.

I.—THE PURSUIT.

Desperate Desmond, the international crook, has captured the beautiful Rosamond and is making away with her to hide from Claude Eclaire. But Claude has persuaded the revolutionists of his innocence and has been freed especially for the chase of the scoundrel and the beautiful girl whom he has treacherously made captive.

II.—IN THE STAGE BOX.

For safety, Desmond has forced the helpless Rosamond into the imperial theatre, where he takes her to one of the boxes from which he can observe all the persons entering the house. As the villain bought the last two tickets, he feels reasonably sure that Claude can't get in, as ticket speculators are barred in Russia.

III.—OUR HERO'S RUSE.

But Claude, ever ready and spurred on by feelings of love and hate, resolves to pose as an expressman and so gain entrance to the stage. There are various ways of getting on the stage, but this is a new one on us. Hoisting an inoffensive trunk on his shoulders he—— ——reaches the stage just as the curtain is being rolled up. The curtain, you will notice, has a convenient loop on the inside to which Claude clings. If it wasn't for that loop his scheme would be for naught. Strange how little things sometimes prove indispensable.

V.—FACE TO FACE.

For the three thousand and oneth time in his career the villain is temporarily foiled. A moment's thought, however, is enough to restore his confidence, and he chuckles, as all good villains do, before putting into effect a quickly-thought-out plan of escape.

VI.—POOR, POOR, CLAUDE!

"I'm the boy!" shouts Desperate Desmond as his alarm of fire brings down the asbestos curtain in no light weight to have resting on one with all its force. Tomorrow we shall see how Claude manages to live through this terrible experience.

A new elevated station, to cost $250,000, will be built at Dover street, in accordance with the Boston Elevated Company's plan to enlarge all of its stations to carry an eight-car system. The station, which probably will be in use early the coming Winter, will provide double the present number of exits and entrances and a slightly larger platform space.

In other respects it will be much more convenient than the present arrangement, and four entrances, one on each of the four corners of Dover and Washington streets, will relieve congestion.

GRAND TRUNK BILL IN SENATE

People at the State House who are supposed to know about things, said early today that the Grand Trunk Railway Bill might be expected to pass the Senate late this afternoon or early tomorrow. The Grand Trunk Bill was passed by the House yesterday with only one vote against it.

Members of the Legislature are hopeful of getting away early next week and returning to their homes for the year. There are only slightly disturbed by reports that the Governor is about to wage war with them for the passage of his Public Utilities Commission Bill.

The Governor was inaccessible last night. His friends say he means to keep the Legislature in session until the Legislature is willing to pass the Public Utilities Bill. Republican legislators say this will mean that the present session will run over into the next.

Representatives of the Grand Trunk were today inclined to be enthusiastic over the passage of the Grand Trunk Bill in the House by what was equivalent to a unanimous vote.

The Grand Trunk Railway had done no lobbying for the bill. It had not retained the services of none of the corridor buttonhookers.

The Massachusetts House of Representatives passed the Grand Trunk Bill in response to a public demand for "another railroad for Massachusetts." Members of the House said today that the publicity campaign which Charles Hall, the Grand Trunk Railroad nothing beyond the ordinary expenses of its publicity experts—had done to do with the House vote than anything else. Practically every member of the House had heard "in no uncertain terms" what the folks back home.

Senator John B. Schoonmaker of Ware, Senate chairman of the Railroad Committee, said today that he expected that the Grand Trunk Bill passed by the Senate without amendment.

The Grand Trunk Bill ought to be on the desk of the Governor by Monday or Tuesday.

After that Governor Foss will let the Legislature and the State House gang get plans with reference to an extension of the session and a contest for his Public Utilities Commission Bill.

THE INDIAN DURBAR IN MOTION PICTURES

Color motion pictures of the Indian Durbar and Palm Beach as it looked last Winter were given last night to an audience that filled Tremont Temple. The former pictures showed the King and Queen of England on their tour through India, while the latter gave an idea of how Mayor Fitzgerald and other Bostonians enjoyed themselves at America's famous Winter resort. The Palm Beach pictures were given as a side line, the feature of the evening being the Durbar pictures. The Durbar in kinematolor was made by royal command of the Emperor and Empress of India, as a record in pictures of their coronation at Delhi. The appropriation to Charles Urban, an American, for this service was $100,000 to cover expenses.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

Market's Tone Firmer, but Trading Dull

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, May 24.—Midday: There was a firmer tone to the Boston market today, although trading was without much activity. The general movement was upward, and among coppers to make early and fractional gains were Isle Royale, Butte and Superior, Boston & Corbin, Hancock, North Butte, Osceola and Indiana.

Superintendent Geddes of the Old Colony mine has telegraphed President Fay regarding diamond drilling at the property: "Old Colony No. 14 drove 135 feet in mixed trap and amygdaloid carrying some copper. No. 15 drill is still reaming."

During the session Wool to the New York market prices ranged higher, but American Tobacco declined a couple of points on realizing sales.

American Tobacco Still Higher.

When the New York market opened, American Tobacco was once more the ascension feature, rising from 273, the closing price yesterday, to 278. The gain for this issue yesterday was 6½.

The market had a better tone at the start than during Thursday, and while few issues ran counter to the active ones showed a tendency to climb. There was a demand for hard coal road issues, and Lehigh Valley, which had a fair call at the start, rallied and gained ⅝, while Reading advanced ¼. There was support for New York traction stocks.

Steel common went up ⅜. The same amount of gain was made in Union Pacific and American Smelting. Canadian Pacific and Atchison advanced ⅛.

The curb was in full and steady.

American railroad shares and Canadian Pacific were steady in London, on professional support.

Copper Metal and Mining Notes.

It is stated in New York that the United Metals is in sure do New York that the United Metals Selling Company, handling the Amalgamated output, offered the metal yesterday at 16½ cents a pound. There were no bookings reported at 16¾ for electrolytic. There was not much demand, from all accounts, but it is believed by sellers and producers that the bulk is only temporary. Export business so far for May total about 40,000,000 pounds.

In the London market at the close today spot was quoted £78 5s, an advance of 2s 6d, and futures at £74 5s, 2d, an advance of 5s. The sales of spot were 100 tons and of futures 900. The market there was steady.

It is stated that the United States Smelting Company is coming about $350,000 a month or at the rate of $4 a share on common stock before depreciation charges.

Higher price for copper will result in the immediate opening of the old Tecoma branch of the Osceola Consolidated. No. 3 Kalumet & Hecla is recently damaged by fire, will be closed and repaired.

Ore from the Old Mignon mine shows 3.8 per cent. copper, 3 ounces of silver and 42¢ per cent. lead.

It sold for $8 a ton after paying all treatment charges. The mine will begin these or four cars a week for smelting, and this output will be about doubled if labor can be had. The work around Jane's is said to be.

The Bingham Mail Bureau has received a dispatch from Butte which reads: "The rain which here-to-day has fallen on the 1,900-foot level shows two feet of ore, with prospects of opening larger. The ore carries silver, copper and gold; ounces of silver to the ton, which makes it richer than anything than any ore taken from a copper mine in Butte."

Lawson, Boston & Co. say, concerning copper mining shares at this time: "Under the present price of copper metal a great majority of the copper companies are handling very much in excess of their present dividends, whether these are temporary or permanent. Companies which have not made disbursements for years may be expected to join the ranks of the dividend payers, while others will make their initial disbursement. Should the price of copper metal be maintained, which seems very probable, the increasing profits of companies now paying will be large, and many of those mines which recently increased their rates should have even larger disbursements."

Financial News in Brief.

It is now claimed that United States Steel Corporation's earnings during June from the sale of steel products alone will amount to $8,000,000. About the most favorable guess of the total for the quarter, however, is $20,000,000.

An improved condition is reported at the Mexican properties of the American Smelting and Refining Company. It has smelters at Chihuahua, Monterey, Aguas Calientes, Velardena and Mesteno. All are said thirty-five per cent.

The Southern Pacific road has ordered 1,700 cars and the Rock Island Air Line twenty-six locomotives.

China is trying hard to put itself upon a war basis and financiers say it is why her exports are much greater than her revenues. The estimate for the fiscal year is a total revenue of $277,000,000 and expenditures of $403,500,000. The deficit is expected to be a big factor.

Chairman Robert S. Lovett of the Harriman lines declares in Dallas that Texas laws make it impossible to finance railroads there and until they are changed there can be no material development of transportation in that State.

Bradstreet's says that, aside from specialties, in stock markets in this country is largely due to European conditions. The Balkan war, money losses when the Macomb slumped and the condition in Austria has been to sell and not to buy. The unloading of Canadian Pacific there has been a feature in that. There are no new frontiers in finance than in 1907.

It is also said that the only thing that the present boring of steel and industrials is the biggest earning power for this year, from the Government's report, and the fact that the steel corporation has bought 20,000 tons of sheet bars in the open market and is negotiating for a great quantity of open hearth billets.

"Wall Street's dodged corruption," said Samuel Untermyer, counsel for Rutland minority stockholders before the copper Mines line control of that road, to Justice Gaynor in the New York Supreme Court today. "But we do not propose to let the New Haven after investing its consciences with the purchase of the Rutland, escape."

Some dissension within the United Wireless Telegraph Company is reported. There are now two factions in finance than in politics.

It is also said that the only

Professor Wilson Complains That Office Seekers Steal His Time

What About "Appropriating" the Time of the State That Hires You, Professor?

©Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner.

Professor Wilson, candidate for the Presidency, and now and then Governor of New Jersey, complains that his time is stolen by office seekers, and that he "can only think seriously of the big problems after I get home, tired in mind and body, in quiet old Princeton."

Let us all sympathize with Professor Wilson. Let us also sympathize with the State of New Jersey.

If it is wrong for office seekers to steal the time of a Governor, is it not also wrong for a Governor to "appropriate" the time and salary of the State?

Professor Wilson has been outside of the State of New Jersey 14 times since the beginning of this year.

He has been on prolonged campaigning trips, struggling for Presidential delegates.

He has been Governor a very short time. But his absences from the State of New Jersey and from his work as Governor have been equivalent in days' pay to more than $3,000 of his salary—which is $10,000 per year.

These figures are obtained from the Treasurer of the State of New Jersey. The Treasurer of the State withholds the Governor's salary when the latter is away and pays it over to the President of the State Senate.

If Professor Wilson had actually allowed the President of the Senate to take his salary and keep it, during the Professor's absences, then the absences might be excused.

The public would say the Governor has neglected his work, looking for another job while supposed to be Governor, but at least he doesn't take his pay from the State for the time that he has not worked as Governor.

Professor Wilson, however, in regard to his salary does not follow the law of the State.

Every dollar of salary nominally given to the President of the Senate, in Professor Wilson's absence, has actually gone into the pockets of the Professor.

In every case, as the State Treasurer's records show, the checks for the salary of the absent Governor, paid to the President of the Senate, have been reindorsed back to Professor Wilson, who pocketed the money.

We ask conscientious business men their honest opinion of this transaction.

Suppose you had a hired man to work for you and had made a rule that when he was absent a subordinate must do all his work and get his pay; and suppose that employe were absent repeatedly for long periods, neglecting your business; and suppose you learned that his salary, nominally paid to the subordinate, had been invariably turned over to him by that subordinate! What would you, as a business man, think of the honesty of that transaction?

What do you, as a voter, think of the conscience which prompts Professor Wilson to take from a subordinate in office the salary which he has not earned and which the law says must go to the subordinate?

You know that the power of the Governor of New Jersey in the way of patronage, appointments, etc., is ten times greater than that of the average Governor in the United States.

The Governor of New Jersey appoints judges, he appoints and even names to offices which are elective in other States those officials that license saloons—thus controlling politics.

We know nothing about the inducements, promises or threats that may have persuaded the President of the New Jersey Senate to give back to Professor Wilson, the Governor, a large sum of money which the law gives to the President of the Senate. But we do know that Professor Wilson's tremendous power, based on the carefully built-up system of crooked politics in New Jersey, would make it possible for the Governor, however, to suggest the ruin of the President of the Senate politically, and to ruin all of his friends and supporters.

It will be interesting to learn at the approaching primaries what the VOTERS of New Jersey think about Professor Wilson and his treatment of THEM.

Is it fair to be absent from the State week after week, neglecting the task undertaken and campaigning for another office?

Is it fair to discuss and think of nothing but the Presidency, when the State of New Jersey has problems of the greatest importance to the citizens of the State, problems that need attention and that are neglected?

Is it fair, by arguments the nature of which only the Professor and the President of the Senate could divulge, to take from the latter the unearned salary of the Governor which the law gives to that President and to put it in the pocket of the Governor, who has not earned it?

These questions we leave to the voters of the State of New Jersey and to the citizens of the country at large.

What man would keep in his own employ a man acting toward him as Professor Wilson has acted toward the State of New Jersey?

And what man can give his vote at the primaries for the President of the United States to the individual to whom he would not confide an important clerkship in his own business office?

Antarctic Continent an American Discovery

The Story of How England Has Long Worn the Stolen Honors of a Yankee Captain

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

ONE of the prettiest examples of the well-known British practice of appropriation, exercised on every possible occasion, in all quarters of the world, has recently been exposed by General A. W. Greely.

In January, 1821, Captain Nathaniel Brown Palmer, a Connecticut man, only twenty-one years of age, commanding the sloop Hero, of 44½ tons, then on a sealing expedition to the South Shetland Islands, discovered the northwestern part of the Antarctic continent in about latitude S. 68 degrees, longitude W. 55 degrees. Like Columbus, he did not know that it was a continent he had found, and, like him, too, as General Greely points out, he was robbed of the honor of having his name attached to the new land which he had been the first to visit.

While the fleet of sealers to which the Hero belonged was engaged, late in 1820, in capturing seals at the South Shetlands, another sharp-eyed Yankee, Captain Benjamin Pendleton, saw from his lookout, on a volcanic crater, snow-capped peaks far in the south. Captain Palmer determined to sail in the direction of these peaks in search of new sealing grounds. The result of his enterprise has already been mentioned—he found the corner of the Antarctic continent which projects farthest toward Cape Horn. The distance from the South Shetland Islands was about seventy miles.

Captain Palmer noted that the land was mountainous and covered with snow. He entered several bays and found sea leopards, but no seals. On his way home he met a Russian exploring expedition under Captain F. G. von Bellingshausen, and communicated to him full information of the discovery which he had just made.

For about ten years, until 1831, the name of Palmer Land was attached to the young captain's discovery. One of his fellows on the expedition, an English sailor, George Powell, brought out a map of the South Shetland Islands on which he loyally charted "Palmer Land," and this nomenclature was promptly adopted by French official publications.

Then the usual thing happened. The Enderby brothers, English-men, one of them "an influential member of the Royal Geographical Society," fitted out an expedition, commanded by John Biscoe, a retired master in the Royal Navy, and Biscoe visited Palmer Land, whereupon, in the high British fashion, the name of the discoverer was summarily thrown out and that of the "First Lord of the Admiralty" substituted, and so Palmer Land, by order of "the mistress of the seas," became "Graham Land."

In the usual way, also, British writers have discredited and ignored the work of their countryman's predecessor, preferring even to give the honor to the Russian Bellingshausen rather than to allow it to be retained by an American, to whom it justly belonged. The Encyclopedia Britannica, published in 1875, mentions neither Palmer nor charts his discoveries." Its new edition, "Americanized for the United States," admits in two lines that 'Nathaniel Brown Palmer discovered the mountainous archipelago (!) which now bears his name," and then "proceeds to give a column regarding John Biscoe," whose explorations resulted in the ousting of the true discoverer. An honorable exception should be made in the case of Dr. Hugh Robert Mill, who says that, as a matter of historic justice, Palmer's name should be retained.

Captain Wilkes, the American discoverer of the Antarctic continent (as a continent) and who gave it that name, has suffered in a similar way from British jealousy, misrepresentation, appropriation and belittlement in order that his rival, Captain J. C. Ross, may have all the honor. Says General Greely: "The discrediting of Wilkes by standard English authorities has been bold, open and persistent for seventy years, although occasionally in late years some able, impartial expert like the Scottish scientist, Sir John Murray, has expressed belief in him."

All this, it must be confessed, is not calculated to create much general sympathy for the unconcealed disappointment of the British geographers in the fair beating out of their champion, Captain Scott, by the brave Norwegian, Amundsen, in the race for the South Pole. The British formula in such cases never varies, and it is again illustrated by the attacks in London on the American investigation of the Titanic horror. Everything is "ignorance," "boorishness" and "backwoods manners" that does not come out of the tight little isle.

Massachusetts and Hawaii

BOTH Should Be Represented at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in 1915—Governor Foss is RIGHT.

Governor Foss, in a rather sharp note to the members of the Massachusetts Legislature, calls their attention to the fact that they are greatly behind the times in the matter of the Panama-Pacific exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915—even behind Hawaii and the Philippines—in not providing for proper representation at this great gathering.

It is presumed that this omission of the Massachusetts Legislature is simply an oversight. The celebration of the opening of the Panama Canal means much to Massachusetts, much to New England. This old State will not go unrepresented, surely, at the exposition.

The Governor is right in noting this omission. The Legislature should take the matter in hand at once.

New England people know something of the spirit of San Francisco since the great fire that wiped that city almost from the map. And it goes without saying that the Exposition will reflect the spirit of the people. That means, in a word, that they will MAKE IT A BIG SUCCESS.

No better opportunity has ever been offered New England to advertise her wonderful natural advantages, her remarkable industries, than will be afforded by the San Francisco Exposition.

There is no reason why this State should be BEHIND THE TIMES in anything. Massachusetts, with all her glory of the past, must not take a back seat to any other State—certainly not to HAWAII and the PHILIPPINES.

The Married Man and the Girl Again

—AND—

A Few Letters from the Girls

By Dorothy Dix

A FEW DAYS ago I wrote an article for this column in which I tried to show girls not only how wrong, but how silly, they were to indulge in love affairs with married men.

I tried to prove to them that, aside from all questions of morality and of the cruel wrong they did in robbing a wife of her husband's love and children of their father, and breaking up a home, they made a losing bargain for themselves.

I pointed out that they compromised themselves and ruined their good names for nothing; that they wasted their youth and the freshness of their hearts on men who could not marry them; that they jeopardized their chances of ever having husbands and homes of their own, as few men care to marry a woman who has been through such an experience, and that the end must be disappointment and disillusionment, either the tragedy of the dragging on through years of a hopeless passion, or else the grimmer tragedy of a woman forsaken when her youth and beauty are gone for a fairer and younger face.

In response to this article I have received more than thirty letters from young women who are indulging in this peculiar form of idiotic sentimental folly. They defend themselves with warmth and eloquence on the ground that they can't help loving as they do, and that the man is tired of his wife, anyway.

In one of these letters a girl who says she is twenty-one years old, but "with a world-wide experience"—God help her—writes that I am mistaken in thinking that all married men are selfish who win the hearts of young girls. She says that the married man with whom she has had a love affair for the past three years is the noblest, the most honorable and the most unselfish knight in the world, and as a proof of his unselfishness he often says to her: "If the right single fellow comes along I shall be perfectly willing to see you married to him, but till then you have my watchfulness over you."

A Simple Little Girl

One could weep over the unsophistication of this simple little girl, who thinks she knows so much of the world, and who really knows nothing whatever of it, who doesn't understand that such is the watchfulness of the wolf over the lamb.

He tells her that he will be "willing" to see her marry the right man when he comes along, and she gurgles with gratitude at his generosity.

Poor little goose, not to realize that her kind protector has established a quarantine that will effectually keep any desirable man from ever coming along.

Another girl writes that the married man that she fell in love with did, at first, honorably advise her for her own good, but she refused to listen to his wise counsel, and with her eyes open embarked on her career of folly.

She says that she does not expect or ask anything for herself but just the mere knowledge that this man loves her and an occasional scrap of time that he can give her.

For this she is willing to put aside all thoughts of ever having a husband and home of her own, and to occupy an equivocal position in society.

This young woman is very sure that she is going to find perfect happiness and contentment in the mode of life she has mapped out for herself, but she will not.

She will find nothing but misery.

Human nature, and especially the heart of woman, would have to be made over again before any woman could rest satisfied, knowing that the man she loved belonged by right to another woman; that his interest was centred in a home in which she had no part; that another woman bore his name and his children; that the most of his time, the most of his money, the most of himself went to this other woman.

Don't Do It

Soon jealousy will eat out her very soul, and that will be her punishment for the wrong that she has done another woman.

But these letters from weak and self-deluded girls, yielding to their own impulses and seeking to justify them, are only part of the replies to the question I raised. There have been others, written in the clear, cold light of experience, that have told how such folly must end.

One comes from a little girl who says she is twenty-two and feels as though she were ninety-two, so old is she in sorrow. She also fell in love with a married man and lived for a few months in a romantic dream of bliss.

Now the man is tired of her and she spends her days running after him, haunting the places where she is likely to see him, calling him up on the telephone, bumbling her pride to beg for even a visit from him and knowing that he is weary of her and wishes that she would let him alone.

That's the common end of the romance with the married man, for the man who has been faithless to one woman is seldom loyal to another.

Then here is another letter written by a mother:

"Seventeen years ago my daughter became acquainted with a married man. I entreated her not to receive his attentions, but she was so infatuated with him that she refused to listen to me. She said she loved him so much she could not give him up.

"The affair has continued all of these years, during which they have waited for the man's wife to die, and now she is in better health than she has ever been. My daughter was twenty-four when this affair began. She is now past forty-one. Her sisters are all married and have happy homes and children of their own. But this daughter has sacrificed her chances of being established as they are. She can only look forward to a lonely old age, during which she must depend on her own labor for support. I know she sighs in vain now for the years she has fooled away, the chances she has thrown away for one of the most selfish and meanest of men. I do not blame him any more than I do her. She deliberately did wrong, and now she must pay the penalty."

These letters that I have quoted are all genuine, bona-fide ones. They are little bits of actual experience. Is there anything in them to show aught but the supreme folly and the certain wretchedness that is sure to come of a girl permitting herself to fall in love with a married man?

DON'T DO IT, GIRLS. THAT WAY LIES DESTRUCTION.
